The Day Canada Said Sorry

By JACK SCOTT, Times Staff
(Second of a Six-Part Series)

TOKYO — In what surely must be the only case of its kind, ever, the Canadian embassy had cause the other day to apologize to a nation.

The embassy's beaver-busy trade and commerce department bought space to say to the Japanese people that they were ever so sorry, that those Canadian fur coats — some in mink and sable priced as high as $7,500 — had been sold out.

The imports had run a series of beautiful, full-color ads (using models who'll do no good whatever for our brassiere industry) and to almost everybody's surprise the entire first shipment was gone overnight.

If our Canadian diplomats here had egg on their faces, it failed to hide the sheer delight that the event gave them.

After years of peddling our resources raw to this nation — the "logs and rocks" business as it's been known — we now have a foot in the Japanese door with a tremendous market for manufactured, processed good that can mean Canadian employment and yen in the pocket — and the way the Japanese yen is going, trat's the stuff to have, baby.

Last week the ground was broken for the construction of three demonstration houses — one skeletal, one framed, the third a completed home — to show the Japanese the advantages of Canadian-finished lumber and, hopefully, to nudge them toward adopting building standards of two-by-fours and the rest instead of the haphazard Japanese system of building.

Next week one of the largest of Tokyo's department stores will be showing Canadian men's and women's fashions, tailored for the smaller Japanese figure.

Come October at least 16 Canadian companies will be exhibiting repair equipment, clutch plates and other specialty parts at Tokyo's annual motor show.

In addition to the million-and-a-half dollars in Canadian fur coats that we're expecting to sell here this year, there's a brand new market for processed foods, high-quality upholstered furniture that will find a place in the increasingly westernized homes fast becoming the fashion for the affluent Japanese, sporting goods (two million Japanese have taken up golf and hunger for imported equipment), apparel that's made by the smaller, eastern Canadian specialty shops, ornamental jewelry, aero-space, computer and electronic products — a Montreal firm built and installed the flashing price board in Tokyo's booming stock exchange — and a wide variety of other products that require more than a faller's saw and a miner's shovel.

Questions Galore

In Tokyo these days the visiting Canadian finds himself being asked about the possibility of pre-fabricated homes, about Canadian-made water bombers for fire protection or the supplying of newsprint rather than pulp, steel rather that iron ore because (as they would have it) we can absorb the pollution of processing with less evident damage. There are repeated and informed queries, too, about joint development of the Alberta tar sands with refining on the site.

There is, in fact, an impressive array of Canadian "firsts" that have received scant publicity back home.

A Don Mills, Ontario, computer firm signs its first order of $2.6 million for data entry equipment to be supplied to Japan's largest maker of computers. Twenty tons of western Canadian faba beans arrive to be tested by Japanese cattle-growers. Exports of Canadian pork increase so dramatically that Japan may replace the United States as our biggest customer.

A Montreal clothing manufacturer signs a five-year deal with an Osaka firm to provide styling and merchandising expertise. A Manitoba firm ships its first order of 200,000 pounds of skim milk powder. A Kitchener company begins manufacturing post office sorting equipment in a deal with Nippon Electric, using Japanese technology.

Canadian businessmen here shake their heads dolefully at the spectre of massed wholesalers, trading companies and other middle men who take their cut with a vengeance in a society where government and the apparatus of private profit-making are closely knit. Those sables that cost $7,500 here, retail in Montreal for $2,000.

There's some cynicism, too, about how far Japan will really go in letting foreign goods compete with domestic goods. One calls the "liberating" of import restrictions "more Kabuki Theatre than reality."

But most agree with the view of Maldwyn Thomas, the soft-spoken head of the embassy's commercial section, who takes the optimistic view.

"Sure, there are difficultes, some of them hidden," Thomas concedes, "but the fact is that Canadian companies are coming in here as they never have before and they're finding a growing market for their goods, especally in the quality, luxury lines. Until recently the Japanese hadn't been aware of what we could do and we, in turn, hadn't made a serious attempt at selling them. The sheer size of this consumer market and its insatiable demand for foreign goods is working for us all the way. Then, too, with the revaluation of the yen, we're much more competitive than we ever were."

Thomas, being a diplomat, doesn't allow himself a wince with the remark, but for the Canadian visitor who remembers when the dollar — Yankee or Canadian — was a thing of beauty and power in this land it's a sad thing to see it so emasculated now.

Research Institute For UVic

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

A high-level research institute will be set up by the provincial government at the University of Victoria by the end of this year, Resources Minister Robert Williams said today.

Williams said the institute will consist of highly-qualified academic personnel who will carry out research projects assigned by the provincial government.

The institute, to be headed by American resource economist Mason Gaffney, will be funded 100 per cent by the provincial government.

Funding will be through the $5 million special fund set up this year by the government for research. Williams said interest from this fund should run between $350,000 and $450,000 per year.

The minister added that he would like to see the research fund expanded to $10 million and will make such a recommendation to the provincial treasury board before the next budgetary session of the legislature.

Gaffney, 49, is a PhD graduate from the University of California at Berkeley. He was head of the University of Wisconsin's School of Economics and worked for the Resources for the Future research project in Washington, D.C.

Williams said some of the institute personnel will likely be available to teach courses at UVic.

He described the role of the institute this way: "The idea was to establish an independent institute that would be involved in pure research in land and resource economic questions. It might spread beyond that later but that's how it will start."

Gaffney, described as a renowned specialist on resource economics, is coming to Victoria to advise the government on how the institute should be set up, the minister said.

Williams said Gaffney has already done some consulting work for the B.C. government, coming to the province for a week last September and for four days in December.

The resources minister called the American a top specialist in his field, and said he has been reading Gaffney's writings for 10 years or more and is "very impressed" with his work.

Actual details of the form the research institute will take will have to be worked out after Gaffney arrives in Victoria July 15, Williams said.

He did say, however, that it

TORONTO EXODUS JAMS BEACHES

TORONTO (CP) — Thousands of city-dwellers, seeking relief from 90-degree temperatures Sunday, forced five Metropolitan Toronto region conservation parks to close their gates early.

Albion Hills, Edmund Boyd, Heart Lake, Bruce's Mill and Clareville conservation areas were barred to visitors Sunday afternoon, but people kept coming — climbing gates and crawling under fences to get in.

Simon Bontje, regional superintendent for the Metro Toronto and region conservation authority, called the situation at Edmund Boyd area "just crazy."

$ Illness 'U.S. Fault'

Times News Services

LONDON—Failure of government central banks to take action against the dollar slide threw European currency exchanges into turmoil today. With no sign of government intervention in the markets the U.S. dollar bounced up and down in value against other currencies.

It dropped to new lows in Tokyo and Hong Kong, but the European situation was confused in the extreme. Trading was reported very light, and what there was was erratic.

Gold, which usually rides the other end of the dollar seesaw, slipped back in price on London's big bullion market as the dollar climbed in Europe. Its price was fixed at $126 an ounce at the morning session. Down $1 an ounce from Friday's fixed price.

The market nervousness followed weekend reports from Basel, Switzerland, that world bankers may move to defend the dollar and hints the United States may intervene in the world currency markets.

"Most dealers are waiting for the opening of American banks to give them a lead," said a dealer for Chase Manhattan Bank in London.

The dollar opened stronger in most European money markets. But indecision and confusion pushed it lower by mid-day nearly everywhere.

Trading which a French dealer described as "erratic" pushed the dollar down in Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, Stockholm and London.

Fish Union Urges 'No' To Offer

Union fishermen in British Columbia are being urged to reject the latest salmon prices offer by the Fisheries Association of B.C.

But the association said the latest prices are "very definitely our final offer. We will go no higher than this."

Association manager Ken Campbell added that there is "a very real possibility" that the whole salmon season will be lost if fishermen members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) turn down the latest prices.

Negotiators representing UFAWU shoreworkers headed back to bargaining with the Fisheries Association of B.C., representing the companies, this afternoon and a meeting was being arranged with UFAWU tendermen.

All three groups, with a combined membership of 7,000, struck the fishing industry at noon Friday.

The Pacific Trollers Association, with 750 members, voted on the weekend to continue fishing and the trollers are expected to head for the fishing grounds Wednesday.

The Fisheries Association of B.C., in a bargaining meeting lasting to shortly before midnight Sunday, offered 50 cents a pound for sockeye this year and 52 cents next year; 40 cents a pound this year and 43 cents next year for coho; 20 cents this year and 21 cents next year for pinks; and 23 cents this year and 24 cents next year for chums caught in most fishing areas.

In addition, the association offered ¼ cent a pound into the salmon welfare fund and workmen's compensation payment of 5-12s of 2.8 per cent of gross earnings.

The union wants these prices: 52 cents a pound this year and 57 cents next year for sockeye; 47 cents and 51 cents for coho; 24 cents and 28 cents for pinks, and 32 cents and 37 cents for chums.

HYDRO BONDS ON SALE TUESDAY

The provincial government today announced the issue of $25 million worth of B.C. Hydro parity bonds, which will go on sale to the public Tuesday.

Deputy finance minister Gerry Bryson said the bonds will carry an interest rate of seven per cent and will mature Aug. 3, 1978.

CONVOY CHERRIES SOLD OUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A resounding commercial success in Vancouver Sunday for the United Fruit Growers cherry convoy marked the latest round in the British Columbia fruit industry's internal struggles.

More than seven tons of fresh cherries were sold in less than one hour in Gastown by the growers, who brought them down Saturday from orchards in the South Okanagan and Similkameen areas in a convoy of 20 trucks.

Hans Rhenisch, president of the UFG, a splinter group of the B.C. Fruit Growers Association, said the growers sold their entire load, about 11 tons in total, at prices well under normal retail prices.

DOWNPOUR KILLS 30

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (UPI) — Authorities said today a predawn thunderstorm Sunday killed at least 30 persons in villages around this tourist city.

Another three persons were listed as missing.

A state government spokesman said 25 persons were injured, several of them critically, when buildings collapsed on them.

The flood also left an estimated 1,500 persons homeless.

Authorities sent emergency relief to the villages, where a mass burial was scheduled for the flood victims.

"It was unbelievable," a policeman said. "It was so quick that people didn't even have time to get out of bed before the water was on top of them."

TANAKA'S PARTY WINS IN TOKYO

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's ruling Liberal Democratic Party surged back to power today as the single largest force in the prestigious Tokyo metropolitan assembly.

Tanaka's party captured 51 of the 125 seats available to retain the same position it occupied in the previons assembly.

But voters also gave a boost to the rapidly growing Japan Communist Party whose campaign hit hard at such urban problems as the worsening urban environment, a housing shortage, inflation, traffic congestion and garbage disposal.

The Communists demonstrated their strength by increasing their number of seats to 24 from the 18 held in the previous assembly.

Crisis Poses Rationing Threat

WASHINGTON (CP) — Rationing of some types of food in the United States "might be necessary in one form or another" if the U.S. is to bolster its dollar and pay for growing imports of energy, a former agriculture department officials says.

Lester R. Brown, head of the department's international agricultural development branch in 1966-69 and currently on the staff of a private foundation here, said in an interview in U.S. News and World Report that President Nixon's curbs on soybean exports and other farm products are a "serious mistake."

Meanwhile, the U.S. agricultural department has computed that the huge drain on U.S. farm produce, mainly wheat, corn and soybeans, is adding an extra $2 billion to consumer food bills.

Even with the freeze announced by President Nixon last month, retail food prices are expected to climb at least 12 per cent this year. Department analysts says at least 1.5 to two per cent of that increase can be linked directly to farm exports.

In all, food spending may rise to $135 billion this year from about $125 billion in main reason for the $10-billion 1972. Higher prices are the boost, but there are more mouths to feed too. And they are eating more.

That means, according to the analysts, that at least $1.75 billion of the expected by the biggest flood of farm exports on record.

Elsewhere in Washington, Congressional investigators today blamed the massive sale of U.S. wheat to the Soviet Union last year for the current high price of food in the U.S., but excused the administration for making the deal.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of congress, said that the agriculture department did a poor job of arranging the sale, that large companies made excessive profits from it and that the government paid $300 million in unnecessary subsidies.

While criticizing the way the deal was handled, the GAO said it benefited the U.S. balance of payments, increased farm income, reduced surplus wheat stocks and put idle acreage back into production.

Brown said the temporary curbs "will clearly aggravate this country's balance-of-payments deficit, further weakening the dollar.

"We must recognize that agriculture is one of the few areas where we have a strong competitive advantage.

"A limit on U.S. farm exports would further weaken the dollar. It would certainly limit our ability to import the vast quantities of petroleum that we must have from abroad to keep U.S. business and industry going.

"Anyone who seriously proposes limiting farm exports must also be prepared to pose a very stringent program for rationing gasoline."

Nixon Killed Probe, Congressman Hints

NEW YORK (Reuter) — A Brooklyn congressman said today President Nixon may have been involved in a conflict of interest in connection with the dropping of a proposed justice department investigation of a company owned by one of the president's closest friends.

Representative Bertram Podell, a Democrat, said a proposal to investigate the Precision Valve Corp. of Yonkers, N.Y., owned by Robert Abplanalp, was "suddenly squelched" after it was referred to then Attorney-General John Mitchell for approval in late 1970.

Mitchell, whose long-awaited public testimony starts Tuesday, was interviewed by staff lawyers for Senate Watergate Committee today.

He appeared in good spirits and chatted freely with reporters, although he said little of substance.

Asked if his wife Martha would accompany him to the hearings Tuesday, Mitchell replied, "well, we'll have to wait and see."

Asked if his testimony would implicate the president, he replied, "my testimony is tomorrow, not today."

Informed sources said Mitchell would not implicate Nixon, his former law partner in New York and an associate and friend of the president for many years.

Podell, referring to the "squelching" of the investigation into Abplanalp's company, said "the action took place on or about the same time" that Abplanalp created an investment company and purchased all but 5.9 acres of the tract on which President Nixon's home at San Clemente, Calif., stands.

Podell said he has "documents and memos which demonstrate the birth and death of an anti-trust action" against Precision Valve.

He said he plans to turn the data over to Archibald Cox, special Watergate prosecutor, for "a complete and full investigation" to determine whether there was any connection with the San Clemente financing and the dropping of the proposed investigation of Precision Valve.

In related developments:

— Senate Democratic leaders indicated Sunday there will be no effort to force Nixon to testify on the Watergate affair and said it was possible but unlikely that a subpoena would be issued for White House documents.

"I doubt the committee . . . can subpoena a president of the United States," said Sen. Herman Talmadge (D—Ga.), a member of the Senate Watergate Committee. But if the White House withholds documents sought by the committee, he said, "we might get to" the point of issuing a subpoena.

—Nixon's refusal to submit White House documents to the Senate committee investigating the Watergate case has cost him the support of the one committee member he thought he could count on, Senator Edward Gurney (Rep.—Fla.).

Gurney aligned himself against the president Sunday, saying he thinks the committee should be allowed to see any White House documents directly bearing on the June 17, 1972, bugging of the Democratic party headquarters in the Watergate office building.

—American Airlines has formally requested a refund of $55,000 in corporate funds illegally contributed last year to President's Nixon's Re-Election Campaign.

The company has acknowledged to the fiance committee to re-elect the president that the Nixon organization did not know the money came from corporate coffers rather than legally from individuals, a source close to American Airlines confirmed in reply to a reporter's inquiry.

Duncan Mayor Eyes 100,000 Tax Savings

DUNCAN — A change in the Municipal Act may save Duncan taxpayers as much as $100,000 next year, says Mayor Jim Quaife.

Under the new amendment, passed at the spring session of the legislature, municipalities with populations under 5,000 are exempted from paying their law administration costs.

Duncan qualifies for the exemption, and from July 1 on doesn't have to pay for seven police officers plus law court costs.

Next year the benefit will be between $80,000 and $100,000 which could mean a drop in the mill rate, said Quaife.

The city's 1973 budget for policing and law enforcement was $110,000.

... RESEARCH

is intended that institute personnel would be fellows of the institute and hold professional status at the university at the same time.

Williams said it is intended that the personnel employed by the government will spend half their time involved in institute projects and the other half on research requested by various agencies of the government.

Such problem areas as land administration, resource use and methods of financing government projects will be studied. The institute will be established as a separate entity from any government department.

Williams said interim accommodations for the institute will have to be worked out with the university until the provincial government is able to construct a building of its own on the campus.

UVic president Dr. Hugh Farquahar said today the university is "quite enthusiastic" about the prospect of the research institute setting up shop on the campus.

He said UVic will cooperate fully, although he added that the university is not aware of the exact details involved.

As far as accommodation is concerned, Farquhar said there has been no request as yet from the government for space on the campus, which he said is at a premium this year. He said the government will likely be interested in acquiring space on which to put up a separate building some time in the future and that the expense will have to be borne by the government, not by the university.

Farquhar said he expects there will be a number of "spin-off advantages" connected with the establishment of the institute at UVic. It will bring some of North Ammerica's top specialists in their fields to the campus, where they will be working with and among UVic's professors.

Advantages to students will also be possible, he said.

Farquhar stressed that administration and financing of the institute will be strictly a provincial government responsibility.

Williams said today another aim of the institute will be to allow senior provincial civil servants to take sabbatical leaves and study in their fields at the institute.

He denied earlier speculation that this aspect of the project is connected with a $100,000 program for civil service upgrading announced earlier this year by Civil Service Commission chairman Arthur Richardson.

Williams said he has discussed the institute project twice with UVic officials, once with Farquhar and once with the UVic board of governors.

The UVic reaction was "generally quite favorable," he said, adding that the university officials had regarded it as "quite an exciting idea."

... DOLLAR

scribed trading in the vital dollar-mark market as "normal now and not hectic at all."

The downfall of the dollar was front page headlined news in Paris newspapers and a top item on radio and television newscasts.

Le Figaro headlined: "The immobility of the United States irritates Europeans." In a front page editorial Le Figaro said for Europe "the choice of the next days is between accepting or refusing a "monetary Munich." Nothing can demoralize public more than the feeling that Europe stood with arms lowered, leaving to the United States a discretionary power which they are using to their sole profit."

Le Figaro said Washington should sell its gold reserves of $12 billion and borrow hard currencies in Europe to buy up excess dollars that are causing the dollar to plummet on world money markets.

The financial newspaper Les Echos speculated that Common Market countries might erect import taxes against cheap American goods coming into Europe.

"There is enormous anxiety in Europe today," Les Echos said. "One possible counterblow for the Common Market countries: devaluate collectively their moneys in relation to gold."

European, American, Canadian and Japanese central bankers say they have agreed on a plan to support the beleagured United States dollar, but France's foreign minister says it is up to the U.S. to act first.

The Nixon administration so far has ruled out U.S. intervention to aid the dollar since its fall last week to record lows in Europe. U.S. officials contend that the dollar is undervalued and that normal economic forces will bring a turnaround.

The central bankers met Sunday in Basel, Switzerland, for their regular monthly meeting. But instead of saying nothing for publication as usual, they ended the meeting with a 150-word communique which they apparently hoped would check the fall of the dollar when the currency markets opened today.

'Nothing Illegal' At Laporte Talks

MONTREAL (CP) — Nicola Di Iorio says there was nothing illegal discussed at a meeting attended by the late Pierre Laporte, Frank D'Asti and Mr. Di Iorio two weeks before the 1970 Quebec provincial election.

"I know, because I was there and I'm still alive to talk about the meeting," Mr. Di Iorio said in an interview Sunday.

"As a mattter of fact, the whole thing is a tempest in a teacup."

The April 16, 1970 meeting came to light last week when Robert Burns, Parti Quebecois house leader in the national assembly, told the legislature there was a police report on a meeting between a Quebec cabinet minister and two men reputed to be important figures in Montreal's underworld.

Justice Minister Jerome Choquette told the legislature that the cabinet minister concerned was now dead and Mr. Burns told reporters outside the house that the minister was Pierre Laporte, who was the member for Chambly riding at the time.

STAYED 10 MINUTES

Mr. Di Iorio said Mr. Laporte, who was kidnapped and murdered by terrorists in October, 1970, was only at the meeting for 10 minutes.

"I had never seen him before and I never saw him again.

... FISH STRIKE

George Hewison said negotiators for the UFAWU and the Native Brotherhood of B.C. were told the offer was final but the joint negotiating committees were unanimous in recommending rejection.

"Our committees are just not panicking at those kinds of threats," he said.

Hewison added that the association has made no offer on salmon roe prices. The union has dropped its request for half payment by the companies of Canada Pension Plan premiums.

Union fishermen will vote on the latest offer in meetings between now and Wednesday evening.

Leaders of the trollers' association, which regards itself as a group of independent businessmen and not a labor organization, were meeting today to work out details of continuing fishing.

Association president Joe Garcia said PTA members would take their catch to the United States because they can't land their fish at strike-bound B.C. plants.

He said if PTA members approve the details Tuesday, "we could go fishing Wednesday." They would use packers and take out export permits, he said.

However, Hewison said PTA members will be "under a very great handicap" in exporting to the U.S. because of "very severe restrictions" by the Americans. He accused PTA members of "acting as agents for the companies" by agreeing to continue fishing.

Tendermen, who work on fish-packing boats, voted by a 92 per cent margin Sunday to reject the fisheries association latest offer of a 14 per cent raise this year and 11 per cent next year. They earn between $583 and $784 a month and want $120 a month more this year and $120 a month more next year.

shoreworkers voted last week to reject an offer of $1.10 an hour increase in a two-year contract and $1.54 an hour for women, which would eliminate discriminatory base pay rates by the end of the contract period.

Plant workers want $1.60 an hour over two years plus parity for women. Most shoreworkers earn less than $3.50 an hour.

In Victoria, Elgin (Scotty) Neish, secretary-treasurer of UFAWU Local 24, said picket passes have been issued so union longshoremen and those who service cruise ships which dock at Ogden Point can continue working.

He also said an aerial survey Sunday in Juan de Fuca Strait located only 11 Canadian fishing boats "so there are not too many out there."

World-Wide Respect For Once-Lowly Yen

The floating yen, once pegged at 360 to the U.S. dollar, has been revalued upwards twice in the past two years. Now it takes only 260, or thereabouts, a whopping 30 per cent increase in value. Though it's not used in international trade, the once lowly yen has become, with the West German mark, one of the world's strongest currencies.

Among other things, that means awfully bad news for the Canadian tourist who finds that a modest hotel room may cost him at least $30 a day and a Kobe sirloin with a salad will run close to $15. A visitor to Tokyo's Foreign Correspondents Club will surely be told about the free lancer who's working on a book for tourists to be called, "How To See Japan On $10 An Hour."

Theoretically, this revaluation of the yen means that Canadian goods are cheaper and thus more competitive in Japan and that Japanese exports will be anywhere from 10 to 20 per cent more expensive abroad. While it has certainly helped us in selling here it's also true that many Japanese companies — Sony, the largest exporter of radio and television sets, among others — have found that the performance and good name of their products have kept sales booming despite marginally higher retail prices.

Even so, Japanese exports are levelling off and it's reflected in hithedto unprecedented balance of payment deficits in the first half of this year. Some experts, in fact, are predicting a 1973 deficit of more than a billion-and-a-half dollars, the first deficit in the last five years, though much of this is the result of capital outflows to finance their overseas ventures.

A trade ministry spokesman here told me that the yen revaluation may cut Japan's exports by as much as $300 million for this year. There's a particularly sharp drop, perhaps as much as 50 per cent over the year, in rubber footwear, wall tiles, metal tableware, gloves, chinaware and other sundry goods. Government programs are on the drawing boards to soften the blow for the companies that will be hurt — and their million-and-a-half employees.

Imports, on the other hand, may rise sharply this year by as much as $280 million to an estimated $31 billion as the Japanese continue to reduce tariff rates. Some 2,000 reductions, mainly in agriculture products, but also in such manufactured goods as air conditioners, tractors and aeronautic equipment, have been made in the past six months. More are in the works.

Canada's increasing share in this new market — a 62.5 per cent increase in January, the last month on record, over January, 1972 — is, of course, a happy spin-off from the adjustments Japan is making with the United States to relieve the country's huge trade surplus with the U.S. and to answer the continuing threat of new American surcharges if there's not a more even balance.

"The secret of Japanese success," says one admiring Canadian executive in Tokyo, "is their ability to forecast what's ahead. In the case of American pressure they've reacted with a typical virtuosity."

A freshening flow of North American consumer goods is, in fact, accelerating the westernization that amounts to a mania for the mass of Japanese.

Col. Sanders and his fingerlickin' chicken are on the Ginza and so, to, are Coke and Pepsi, invariably with the highest, largest and brightest neon signs in Japan's cities. McDonald's hamburgers and Kellog's "K", the cosmetics and soaps of Avon, Proctor and Gamble and Max Factor are here. Both Merill Lynch and the Winnipeg-based Investors Growth Fund have set up the first mutual funds with Japanese shareholders. Kentucky bourbon is becoming the "in" drink with the blue-suited, white-shirted businessmen of Tokyo. J. C. Penny is here with a shopping centre. So, too, are Montgomery Ward and Sears Roebuck, breaking new ground with mail order catalogues.

The Japanese will buy fewer than 5,000 North American-built cars this year while exporting their steady stream of Toyotas, Datsuns, Mazdas and the rest, but the goal of making trade a two-way street is more than mere image-making.

Nobutaka Takashima, a handsome, square-jawed, 33-year-old expert in the overseas department of the Ministry of International Trade and Commerce, talked about it with me this week over the cups of green tea that seem mandatory with every dialogue.

"The trend actually began more than 10 years ago, but it's true that there's been a dramatic increase in our imports over the past two years and certainly, as you'll hear, one reason is an anticipation of criticism abroad. We're a cautious, even an anxious, people. I suppose sometimes we over-react. But we see the dangers of all selling and no buying in manufactured goods and we genuinely want consumer products from abroad. In the case of Canada, we don't know nearly enough about what you have to offer. You need to make more of a sales effort here. With the change in the yen and the rising income of the Japanese consumer you could be doing much better."

I wondered if perhaps Japan was putting more emphasis now on the exporting of investments in foreign countries, in partnership deals and outright purchases, than on its exporting of goods.

So much balance-of-payments capital has gone, for example, into land, hotels and golf courses in California and Hawaii that an american businessman in Osaka, admittedly over-stating the trend, told me: "They're doing now, with our money, what they couldn't do in 1941 at Pearl Harbor — they're conquering us."

The Japanese Finance Ministry says that corporate investments abroad at the end of last year stood at more than six-and-a-quarter billion dollars.

Canada is getting a piece of this capital export action, too.

Earlier this year Marubeni, a large Japanese trading corporation, joined with the Fuji Bank to put more than seven-and-a-half million dollars into Brinco Ltd. with a slant eye on Brinco's developments in oil, natural gas, non-ferrous metals, uranium and power. Marubeni, too, is putting big money into Toronto-based Helix Investment Ltd. to promote exports of the 20 Canadian firms in which Helix has an interest. Japanese steelmakers have moved into direct capital participation with Kaiser Resources Ltd., to the tune of $27.5 million, to develop new sources of coking coal.

Takashima smiled a somewhat wan smile when I mentioned these developments.

"Yes, we've had friction and tension there, too, as we've invested our built-up reserves in other nations," he agreed, "but you must remember that our investment abroad is actually less than that of Britain or West Germany. It's just that we started late because we were stripped of everything by the war. It's our velocity that's causing the concern. In the case of Canada we offer investment that you need and that will be of benefit to us, so that we both win. We make the same kind of approach to countries all over the world because we know that we cannot rely on any one source for our needs. It is up to you to set the rules, but, even there, we offer our own guarantees that we'll be good partners."

These guarantees, in the form of government "guide lines" that are as scrupulously followed as if they were on the statute books, specify that Japanese ownership in a joint venture abroad will not exceed 75 per cent, that there'll be a ratio of Japanese workers to local workers of one in 30 and that management will be on a 50-50 basis.

An "investment charter," drafted by the Japan Foreign Trade Council, a private group of trading companies, calls for re-investment of profits within the host nation, public stock sale, prevailing wage levels, anti-pollution safeguards and local management "as much as possible."

"I can't see why we shouldn't welcome it," says the embassy's commercial secretary. "They were once only interested in the logs and rocks, the raw materials for their own factories. Now they're offering depth financing and joint partnership in our secondary industries with no evidence that they're out to dominate the Canadian economy. We need more efficient and diversified industries back home and, God knows, the Japanese are masters of both. They're offering free trade. Surely that's what we want, isn't it?"

(This is the second of six reports on Japan.)

Eleventh-Hour Reprieve?

Discovery that the Reid contract has been null and void for the last nine months due to the highrise developer's failure to consolidate his land holdings into a single property as required by the agreement with the city, opens up a new avenue of speculation.

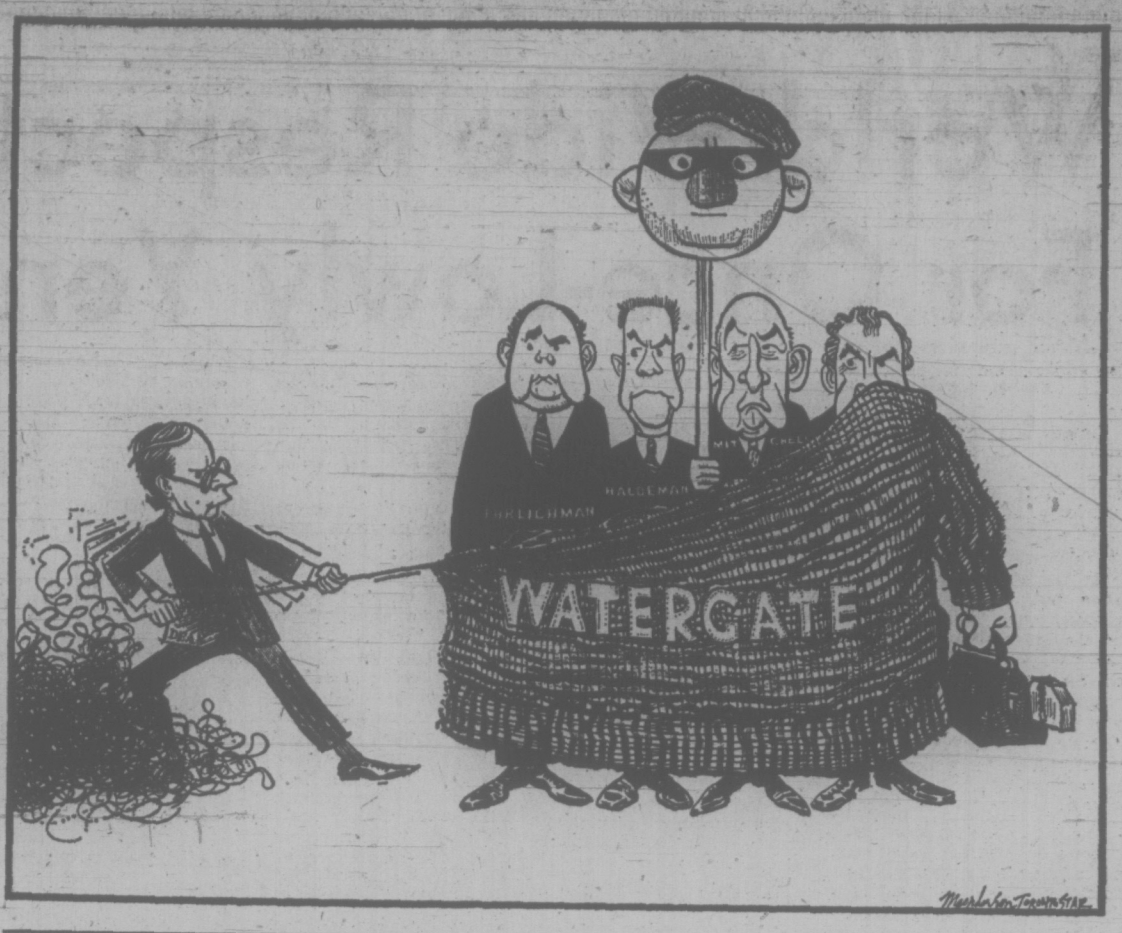
While there is some thought that the city ought not to take advantage of what is a legal technicality—the omission could easily be made up merely with the city's approval—Mayor Pollen rightly notes that the consolidation clause is an integral and important part of the contract and that it has not been implemented by Mr. Reid.

On this basis, there is no valid contract, and the city apparently is under no obligation to let the Wharf Street highrise project proceed. Although there seemed to be general resignation that the city was stuck with the multi-storey monstrosity projecting into the Inner Harbor waters, the situation that has only now been discovered offers a new lease of hope.

So much of the city's development appears to hang upon "legal technicalities." The controversial James Bay highrise project of Mr. Mace has been in serious doubt because City Council, although having indicated earlier agreement to the proposal for a shopping centre and towering structure to dominate the Menzies Street neighborhood, had never actually signed the contract. Mr. Mace was prepared to take the city to court on this point. Yet there seems to be some sentiment on Council that it wouldn't quite be cricket to demand adherence to the terms of the contract with Mr. Reid.

In addition there now has been disclosed the belief that Mr. Reid intends to build only one of the towers to start, with the other to follow at a future date. We have already had a taste of one of these "unfinished symphonies" played by highrise builders. The architectural error at Quadra and View Streets still has a companion tower to be built, but the builder has refused to budge for many months and the surroundings remain an eyesore of raw concrete and stacked debris.

Victoria should not feel any compulsion to be soft in its dealings with determined, shrewd bargainers who see this city as an opportunity for development and gain. Mr. Reid has shown a strange dilatoriness at various stages of the long-drawn-out negotiations with the city. Now would be a good time to look the whole controversial Wharf Street project over again and see if, legal requirements permitting, it could be quietly put away in favor of something more appropriate to the city and more likely to produce lasting community benefit and public satisfaction.



Minority Government Pitfalls

The federal government's introduction of a bill to suspend all ten provincial electoral boundaries commissions shows the pitfalls of minority government. Work to date has already cost Canadian taxpayers more than $1.3 million, but pressure from Quebec and Saskatchewan politicians who stand to lose representation prompted the bill.

If changes proposed in the final report of the British Columbia commission had been instituted this province would have gained three seats, for a total of 26 in the next election. By opting for the status-quo Canadians will go to the polls once again and elect a House of Commons heavily weighted in favor of sparsely populated rural constituencies. And this at a time when more than 16 million Canadians are living in towns and cities.

Now the issue is to be reviewed by a parliamentary committee which will be asked to recommend changes in the redistribution process. The public needn't worry that many politicians will vote their ridings out of existence.

In the past the law provided for Commons redistribution every 10 years to adopt to changing population patterns. The shelved legislation gave MPs about 18 months to come up with a new formula that would consider Canadians' accelerated mobility. By giving the issue to a committee, redistribution is left in limbo. Complete representation by population will have to wait a little longer.

Hopeful Northern Journey

With much of populated British Columbia, including the capital, hugging the 49th parallel it is easy to forget that the province encompasses more than 359,000 square miles, stretching from the sub-Arctic to Victoria's balmy climes. But the provincial government appears to be taking a real interest in the isolated north.

Resources Minister Bob Williams and much of his staff have just returned from a four-week Northern tour, during which they unearthed a number of situations deserving government attention. Among the most interesting: more crown lands will be made available for those who are prepared to pioneer the north; possible improvement of coastal transportation services for communities on the central coast, and new timber policies in the Kitimat Valley.

For many years B.C.'s northern communities never saw provincial politicians except at election time or when they cut ribbons. Decisions affecting northern communities were often made by the stroke of a bureaucratic pen in Victoria. It is to be hoped that Mr. Williams' foray is part of a concerted government effort to get out in the boondocks and find what the people need, and what they are talking about.

HAROLD GREER

Alberta Opens a Court Door

TORONTO — When the Ontario government decided early in June that it would seek ways of taking Alberta to court over the Lougheed government's natural gas policy, it seemed highly unlikely that the Alberta government would unwittingly pave the way.

Yet that is what has happened in the Lougheed government's decision to instruct its Energy Resources Conservation Board to reconsider the approval given many months ago to a long-term contract between Consolidated Natural Gas Ltd. and TransCanada Pipelines Ltd.

By re-opening this matter in the way it has, Alberta has not only presented Ontario with precisely the kind of constitutional case the lawyers here have been looking for, it has solved a rather sticky Ontario problem of procedure.

How to get the issue before the courts on constitptional grounds was something Queen's Park hadn't quite figured out when Premier Davis announced on June 7 "out of determination that there should be a reference to the Courts and a decision as to the legal intent of the Constitution on this matter."

Not Legally Binding

The government could, of course, ask the Ontario Supreme Court for an opinion as to the constitutionality of Alberta's natural gas legislation, but that opinion would be legally neither here nor there. It would not be binding on Alberta.

An opinion by the Supreme Court of Canada would be binding and the federal government has the power, under the Supreme Court Act, to ask for such opinion by reference. The Ontario government has considered the advisability of asking Ottawa to make a reference, but concluded such a request should only be an avenue of last resort, given the federal government's obvious reluctance to get embroiled in energy policy and its woeful lack of political support in western Canada.

It seemed therefore that all that could be done was to construct a civil law action in the regular way in the Ontario courts, possibly using Ontario Hydro's gas contracts with TransCanada Pipelines as the vehicle and arguing, in effect, that TransCanada's inability to fulfil its delivery contracts was the result of improper and unconstitutional conditions imposed upon it by the Alberta government.

This, however, would have muddied the legal waters furiously. Such an action, as well, could probably only be launched after TransCanada was in fact unable to meet its contracts — that is, after the damage was done. And it would probably be at least five years before the case arrived on appeal at the Supreme Court of Canada, where eventually the issue will have to be decided.

In view of all this, the re-opening of the Consolidated case has been a godsend, and Queen's Park has been quick to jump at it with "intervenor" briefs that argue the Gas Resources Preservation Act of Alberta is unconstitutional and, hence, the Energy Resources Conservation Board has no jurisdiction to proceed with the re-hearing, now set for July 10.

PREMIER LOUGHEED

The expectation, of course, is that the Board will reply it does have jurisdiction, in which case Ontario can then seek a prohibitory order from the Supreme Court of Alberta. One advantage in this regard, from Ontario's point of view, is that the matter can be got very quickly before the Albertan Supreme Court and thence to the Supreme Court of Canada, knocking perhaps two or three years off the time required if legal proceedings were initiated in Ontario.

As for legal substance, the Consolidated case offers Ontario everything it could ask for in arguing that Alberta's Gas Resources Preservation Act is unconstitutional.

The object of this legislation is stated to be the preservation and conservation of the oil and gas resources of Alberta and the Energy Resources Board is enjoined not to permit the removal of gas from the province unless it is satisfied the present and future needs of persons within the province can be met without the gas in question.

This is a perfectly proper constitutional position, but the point is, the Alberta Board has already done its duty. It approved Consolidated's removal of the gas some years ago when Consolidated contracted with Northern Natural Gas Inc. to deliver the gas to the American market.

But in August of 1970 the National Energy Board at Ottawa decided the gas was not surplus to Canadian needs and denied the necessary export permit. Consolidated then sold the gas to TransCanada for delivery to eastern Canada, mostly Ontario and the Montreal area. The contract involves 125 billion cubic feet of gas a year and constitutes approximately one-fifth of TransCanada supplies to the Canadian market.

Different Destination

The Alberta government has directed its Board to reconsider Consolidated's removal permit not because there is a question of Alberta's needs being met, but because deliveries are being made to a purchaser other than the one named in the original hearings. In other words, Alberta is objecting to the fact that the gas is going to eastern Canada rather than to the U.S.

This seems an obvious enough attempt by Alberta to control the marketing of its natural gas beyond its borders and as such would appear to be a clear-cut violation of section 91 of the B.N.A. Act, which provides that the federal government may exclusively regulate trade and commerce. In a nutshell, it is open to Alberta to say, in the interests of conservation, how much gas may be removed from the province but, having made this decision, it is not open to Alberta to say where the gas may be sold.

The real object of the re-hearing, of course, is to force a renegotiation of the contract on the question of price. TransCanada now pays Consolidated about 22 cents a cubic foot on the average at the Albertan border and Consolidated's wellhead price is about 18 cents. It is no great secret that TransCanada has been told verbally by the Alberta government that if this latter price is increased to 32 cents, the re-hearing would not be necessary.

It is understood TransCanada has been prepared to settle for 26 cents, but Alberta wants more. Ironically, as a result of the Ontario government interventions, Alberta may have to settle for nothing.

PAUL WHITELAW

Is the 'Balance' Significant?

WASHINGTON — Henry Kissinger's press conferences are usually rambling affairs, interspersed with humor and an easy-going give-and take attitude largely absent in the Nixon White House.

Patience of the top White House foreign policy adviser in dealing with questioners is near-legendary. Indeed, Mr. Kissinger seems almost to enjoy the challenge of difficult queries from correspondents, belying his years as a Harvard professor.

His briefing recently in San Clemente on the results of the Brezhnev visit was no exception to the established Kissinger pattern — until a West German reporter questioned the wording of a paragraph referring to European troop reductions in the final Nixon-Brezhnev communique.

With obvious irritation, Mr. Kissinger told his former countryman that the "future of force reductions in Europe will not be determined by adjectives."

High Spirited

The White House adviser was in high spirits, and justifably so, following the historic Nixon-Brezhnev talks — and his annoyance at the West German's question was an indication of just how sensitive the wording of the comminuque really was.

The query dealt specifically with the dropping of the word "balanced" in the usual American reference to mutual reductions.

Reductions of American's military commitment on the continent, said Mr. Kissinger, will be "determined by concrete programs."

"It will not be determined by constant insinuations of some dark American design," he stated adamantly.

Mr. Kissinger said the substance of the issue is that a reduction of the forces in Europe "might be balanced" without a "unilateral advantage" to either side.

The United States troop cut proposal, he noted, has been submitted privately to America's allies. "We think it has received substantial support from our allies, and we will enter these negotiations, we are convinced, with a reasonable and united position."

Although the controversial wording of the Nixon-Brezhnev communique made headlines in Western European newspapers, the explanation of Mr. Kissinger that there has not been a major shift in U.S. policy was largely accepted by the defence intelligence community here.

Foreign diplomats and strategic studies analysts at several of Washington's prestigious research institutes were in agreement with the state department officials who told me: "There is no significance in the wording of the communique, really. The concept is important and not the terminology.

"The wording has changed, but our aims haven't. The USSR knows what we mean," the official added.

HENRY KISSINGER
. . . showed irritation

Although several military attaches I spoke with dispute that statement, some of their political colleagues in the embassies "felt the European press was making a mountain out of a molehill."

A researcher at the Atlantic Treaty Association here said her impression was that the U.S. had "decided to pave things over" to facilitate the detente atmosphere of the Russian leaders's visit to America.

"The wording of the communique was a trade-off," she added, "but I don't know if it has much significance. The Russians had been hedging on a date for the force reduction talks, and possibly the wording of the communique was a U.S. concession to get a firm commitment on a date."

Darnell Whitt, author of the recent book "Detente Diplomacy" and executive director of the Washington Centre of Foreign Policy Research told me: "Both the words mutual and balanced are ambiguous terms."

He noted that when the possibility of negotiating troop cuts with the Russians was first approved at a NATO meeting in Iceland in 1960, the description "mutual balanced forced reductions" (MBFR) was not employed.

"Originally it was called 'balanced force reductions,' then 'mutual force reductions,' A decision to refer to the talks as 'MBFR' wasn't reached until 1969," he said.

"The Russians have never used the word 'balanced' and they have seldom used the word 'mutual' to describe the talks," Dr. Whitt noted. Despite this, he added, the U.S. and its NATO allies have felt confident that the Soviet Union understands the "trust" of the American bargaining position.

Withdrawals

The Soviet Union, according to the predominant thinking of the intelligence and diplomatic community here, knows that American troop withdrawals from Europe are inevitable regardless of the outcome of the MBFR talks which start next Oct. 30. Russian reluctance to use the term "balanced" reflects the NATO concern that any troop reductions not be a simple percentage basis; rather, the Western allies would like Soviet reductions to reflect the communists' strategic geographical and logistical advantage.

It is commonly felt here in Washington that the wording of the Nixon-Brezhnev communique was a semantic concession, but not a substantive one, in the current spirit of detente.

That's what Henry Kissinger tried to convince the White House press corps last week when the West German correspondent touched a raw nerve with his question. For journalists accustomed to Mr. Kissinger's usually unflappable style, his irritation was additional reason to scrutinize the Nixon-Brezhnev communique.

Amnesty Refused

As a U.S. Army deserter who has been in Canada for almost five years, I look back on those years with great appreciation to the Government of Canada and the (then) Minister of Manpower and Immigration, Allan MacEachern.

All I can say is "thanks": for allowing myself and others like myself to come to this beautiful country as a refuge from policies of a government we weren't prepared to support — for whatever our individual motivations were.

At the time we made the personal decisions to cross the 49th Parallel, each and every draft dodger and deserter had to carefully weigh in his own mind what the move would entail in terms of his future lifestyle and "freedom".

I'm sure that every American military resistor knew that coming to Canada would mean "Farewell America" — good-bye to places, people and things that we grew up with and loved, and that this farewell would be forever.

Anybody who came here not thinking that it would be a permanent move should not have come here! These are the people that are, in most cases, contributing absolutely nothing to Canada.

I cannot for the life of me understand why some ex-Americans have come here and formed organizations like AMEX and Amnesty International. Americans who came here should now be trying to help their new homeland — rather than looking back to what was and crying about their "misfortunes" of being here and not being able to go back "home". Canada should now be thought of as their "home". We all knew about these things when we came here.

(As an interjection, I cannot for the life of me understand why anyone would prefer life in tense, strife-ridden, violent, corrupt America anyway — as compared to the life available in Canada.)

Amnesty! As a deserter, I'm offended at even the thought of it!

The word implies that we have done something wrong and are to be forgiven — or, as some would look at it, that America has done something wrong and is forgiving us for telling them so.

However you look at it, though, someone is apologizing. In my right mind, I can never foresee America saying, "I'm sorry boys. Please come home. You're forgiven." At least I can't see it being said until all the PoWs and war-wounded have deceased.

I personally think that all the time, energy and money being invested in Amnesty promotion and organizations would be better spent on the Committee for an Independent Canada — or something similar.

I would welcome hearing from any other ex-Americans who feel the same way.—A. David Lewis, 55 Maitl

60 YEARS AGO

From the Times of July 9, 1913:

QUEBEC — In less than 44 hours over 6,000 immigrants have arrived in Quebec for the Canadian west. The record breaking invasion was due to fog which delayed the steamers in the gulf and made them arrive together. Five steamers arrived yesterday afternoon and one this morning. The Royal Edward had 1,500 passengers, the Scandinavian 930, the Corsican 1,500, the Canada 1,150, the Cassandra 450, and the Ionian 1,000. At one o'clock this morning all the newcomers had been directed to the Canadian prairies where they will take up homesteads and presumably become law-abiding citizens.

The Hijacked Nation Propped Up by U.S.

By CHARLES FOLEY
The London Observer

(Foley was foreign editor of the London Daily Express for 15 years and founded the Times of Cyprus in 1955 and edited it for five years during the EOKA rebellion.)

Greece is a dictatorship with American patronage. But today, six years after a group of colonels seized power in Athens, the question for Greeks is not whether the U.S. administration is holding up the dictatorship, but how long it can do so in the face of new and rising hatred, which lies behind a series of bombings against American cars and installations.

In the tawdry political thriller that is Greece, one consistent motif is the progress of George Papadopolous. He has taken over the country, the premiership, the regency and the presidency. What is the game plan now for this man from nowhere, whose name is a Greek equivalent of John Smith? Where is he leading his hijacked nation?

A stay in Athens has allowed me to fill in many parts of a puzzle which has persisted since the Papadopolous gang seized power in 1967. Some pieces were found in Cyprus, where junta agents showed their hand in the attempted assassination of Archbishop Makarios, others in America, the chief source of power for the colonels.

The U.S. administration speaks with two voices. While Congress is assured that Papadopolous is being needled daily to restore at least the forms of democracy, military and diplomatic aid has been unstinted. A flickering respectability is bestowed on the regime by visiting firemen, from Vice-President Spiro Agnew to Maurice Stans, former secretary of commerce and chief Nixon election fund-raiser. The Pentagon serves as the colonels' insurance company, and U.S. investment as their economic life-jacket.

Ambassador Henry J. Tasca cheerfully confesses: "This is the most anti-Communist group you'll find anywhere. There is just no place like Greece to offer these facilities with the back-up of the kind of government you have got here." "You" not "We" is the only pretence.

The quotation comes from a diary kept by a visiting congressman who was briefed at the U.S. Embassy and Joint U.S. Military Aid Assistance Group (JUSMAAG) headquarters. He showed me a "sanitized version" of his notes on U.S. aims and military activities in Greece. At one point a two-star general is recorded as saying: "It's the best damn government since Pericles." JUSMAAG, with its elite staff of more than 100 top military and civil advisers, its training program for the Greek Army, and its hot line to the Pentagon, symbolizes the massive American presence in Greece, which opponents of the regime bluntly call "an occupation force."

The Pentagon prizes Greece as an ace in the super-power game, and Papadopolous as the man to guard it. He has recently opened up the Athens harbor of Piraeus as the Sixth Fleet's home port, bringing ashore another 10,000 servicemen and their dependants. Thirteen other installations also come gift-wrapped — from nuclear missile bases in Crete to the major communications site of the NATO Air Defence Ground Environment (NADGE) — a $250 million "electronic chessboard" against the USSR. More than 12,000 Greek officers have had training in the United States, and the American and Greek commands are meshed into an "old boy" network.

'Needed to Save Israel'

Why has the colonel's Greece become America's forward base in the Middle East? President Nixon gave one explanation: "Without aid to Greece we would have no viable policy to save Israel." Or, of course, U.S. interests in the oil-rich Arab nations. Thus, in defiance of a 112-57 vote in Congress, he has ordered ceaseless shipments of heavy arms and Phantom jet aircraft to the junta.

Among old hands at JUSMAAG, Papadopolous, 55, is jocularly known as "the first CIA agent to become premier of a European country." Many Greeks consider this to be the simple truth, though they note that the state department does not include their country in Europe: it is classified as in the Near East. The charge is that not only did America's Central Intelligence Agency engineer the coup which brought the colonels to power on April 21 six years ago: it may still be concerned in such moves as last month's second "revolutionary coup" which replaced King Constantine with Papadopolous as head of state.

In the light of Watergate all things are possible, but there is also some hard evidence. For perspective, we must glance back to 1964, when Greece's veteran liberal leader, George Papandreou, brought his Centre Union party back to power with 53 per cent of the vote. His son, Andreas, an American by virtue of wartime service in the U.S. Navy, was teaching economics at Berkeley, California. He recovered his Greek nationality to join the government.

As minister of state in charge of intelligence Andreas Papandreou was stunned to find that the Greek secret service, KYP, was in reality a financial and administrative appendage of the CIA. This, he thought, accounted for many obstacles to the new Centre-Left coalition, which was trying to form a modern and independent nation.

Papandreou, who was imprisoned after the coup which brought down his father's government, is today a professor at a Canadian university, but may be met with on resistance missions to Germany (where there are now 400,000 Greeks) and Italy. Tall, pipe-smoking and outspoken, he told me how he discovered that the KYP chiefs had bugged all ministerial conversations and bound them into several volumes for their American mentors.

"We dismissed the top two KYP men and replaced the chief with a reliable officer, General Agoras, who was ordered to protect the cabinet from surveillance. He came back to say he could not do it. All the equipment was American, controlled by the CIA or Greeks under CIA supervision. There was no kind of distinction between the two services. They duplicated functions in a counterpart relationship. In effect, they were a single agency."

Papandreou tried to take the KYP off the billion-dollar CIA budget by having its agents paid by the Greek treasury. He failed in this, but succeeded in shifting the officer who had been liaison man between the KYP and CIA since 1960. "He was George Papadopolous, the present dictator." Soon Papandreou learned that his conversations (which included a long off-the-record talk with this writer) were still being recorded for the U.S. Embassy. He asked KYP's new deputy chief to make a thorough search of his office and home for electronic devices.

"It was not until much later that we discovered he had simply planted a lot of new bugs. Lo and behold, we'd brought in another American-paid operative as our Number Two."

KYP is, in fact, an American creation. It was built up after the Greek civil war of 1945-49, when the U.S. took over from Britain the task of crushing the Communists. Hundreds of KYP agents went to America for training by the Office of Strategic Services, and its successor, the CIA. Among them, for a course in psychological warfare, was Major Papadopolous. A stringent investigation was made of his anti-Communist credentials.

Papadopolous with Nazis

What these contained has never been made public. But a comrade of General Grivas, himself the wartime leader of a fanatically anti-Communist private army called "X," has confirmed circumstantial reports that Papadopolous served as a captain in the Security Battalions raised by the Nazis to hold down British-armed partisans during the war. Most of their work was in the Peloponnese, Papadopolous' home ground, where he interrogated suspects. Papadopolous, said my informant, was a great believer in Hitler's "New Order." He served under a colonel who was installed after the 1967 coup as head of an Athens bank. In the wave of anti-Communist feeling after the civil war, the past was wiped out.

One of the sharkskin-suited species of U.S. military advisers in Athens hinted to me at a party, when I mentioned Papadopolous' German background, that it was related to his subservience to U.S. wishes. "George gives good value," he smiled, "because there are documents in Washington he wouldn't like let out."

Writing in The Observer recently, after a visit to his old resistance friends, C. M. Woodhouse noted how intense official propaganda portrayed Communism as the only enemy Greece had ever had and minimized the German occupation until even Nazi atrocities were seen as provoked by the Communists. This re-writing of history clearly reflects the dictator's concern with the danger that the gap in his official biography may some day be filled in.

Not that his patrons want to shoot holes in the provisional president's image, yet. As an amiable JUSMAAG officer put it: "He controls the most useful piece of real estate around here, a private beachhead in the Med and the last stop for our planes before Pakistan. George may be short on charm, but we trust him. Well, we have to."

Even after being removed from his KYP post, Colonel Papadopolous remained the CIA's front man. Opposition politicians who sought the ear (or the purse) of James Potts, CIA chief in Athens before the coup, were often told: "See George — he's my boy."

George's spywork on the Papandreous, which portrayed them as Leftist fanatics, was a factor in CIA fears that Greece in 1966 was headed for a "red" takeover. The spectre was raised at a meeting of the National Security Council in Washington in mid-February, 1967, when CIA reports from Athens indicated that a right-wing counter-coup was imminent. The question was: Should the U.S. Embassy be told to stop it? The answer, after some agnozing, was "No." Presidential adviser Walt Rostow ended the session by telling White House aides and Near Eastern experts that their "non-action" made the future course of events in Greece inevitable. I have confirmation of this from a senior civilian present at the deliberations.

Conspirators with CIA

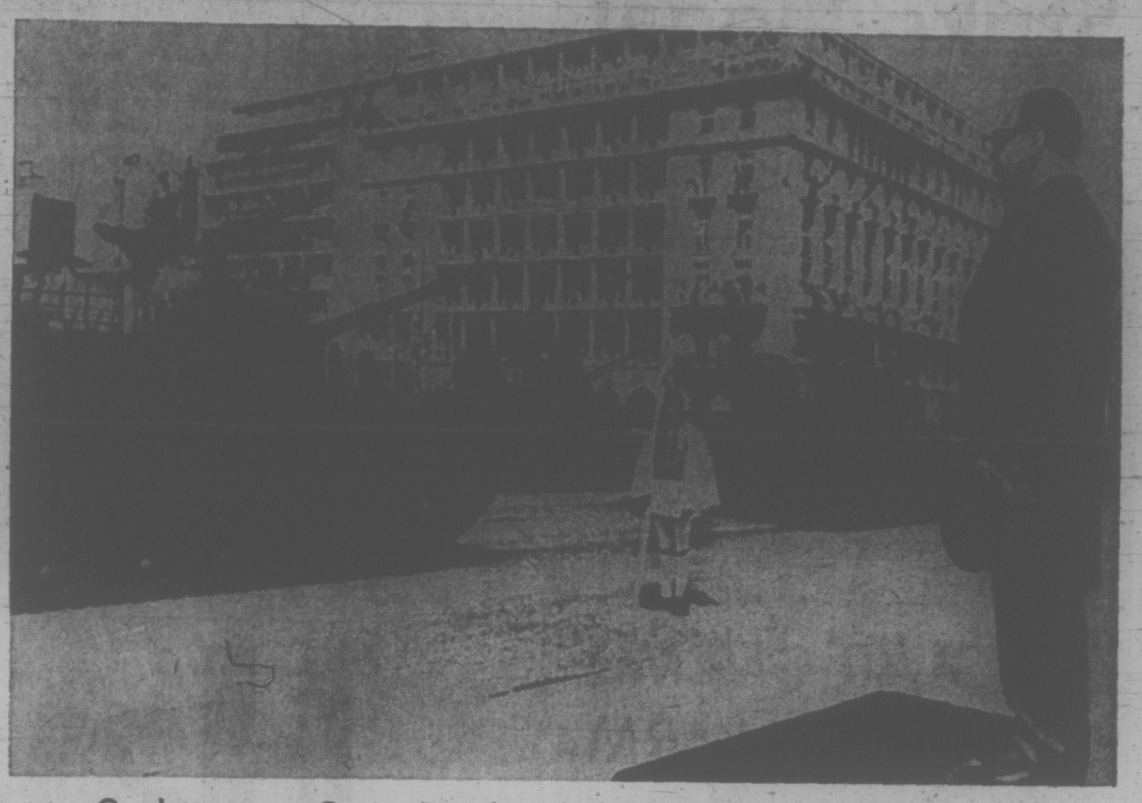
What evidence is there that the CIA worked behind the scenes to promote the 1967 coup? First, the composition of the tiny cabal of obscure officers who launched it. Four of the five chief conspirators were intimately connected with U.S. forces or intelligence. The fifth man, Brigadier Pattakos, had no direct CIA links, but was brought in for the sake of the armored units he commanded.

The means employed were also significant. The NATO "Plan Prometheus," devised in conjunction with U.S. officers, was a contingency scheme for use if Greece faced an immediate threat of war or revolution. Yet when the colonels pushed the button and flooded Athens with tanks, Greece's U.S. allies did not stir.

If the Prometheus alert had been sounded, the country was presumably in the gravest danger. But no planes took off, no marines landed, no move came from the Sixth Fleet, which was off Crete. Greek officers who telephoned U.S. colleagues were told to let nature take its course.

The recent naval revolt has brought a further gloss to light. A KYP agent who fled to Italy insists that a few key CIA agents in Greek uniforms actually backed up operations on the night of the coup, their task being to see that it was bloodless.

Since then a succession of U.S. leaders has visited Athens to voice open approval of the junta and its value to NATO (questionably after the successive purges of the armed forces.) Secretary of Commerce Stans, who collected millions of secret campaign dollars for Nixon's re-election, brought a message of admiration from the president. Secretary of State William Rogers celebrated last American Independence Day with the colonels. His pleasure at visiting a country "where so many principles underlying our own Declaration of Independence had their origin 2,000 years ago" was brought to a blushful climax when Papadopolous lifted a glass to Mr. Nixon's "enlightened policies."



Greek strongman George Papadopoulos takes salute in Athens parade

The high point of the Greco-U.S. wooing came with Agnew's grand tour of his ancestral homeland. Washington had been surprised in 1968 when the unknown Agnew was selected as Nixon's running mate — a surprise dispelled by the discovery that his name was backed by the Pappas family of Boston, one of the most influential contributors to the Republican Party.

Tom Pappas, whose forebears came from the same small village as Agnew's, is the go-between for the Papadocracy and the White House. He enjoys both Greek and U.S. citizenship and served as co-chairman of the finance committee of the Committee to Re-Elect the President while keeping clear of the consequences.

Pappas has boasted of his pride in being "an old CIA hand." He is also proud of his billion-dollar investment in Greece, a complex of petro-chemical and steel plants, oil refineries and tanker fleets. He has won the junta's top prize, one pursued by rival investors as ardently as the Holy Grail — the Greek Coca-Cola monopoly.

Everywhere that Spiro went in Greece Pappas went too. His bulky, sweating figure squeezed from the helicopter behind the Veep. He arranged a dinner for Agnew and the colonels, at which the vice-president extolled the "achievements" of the junta and its "constant co-operation with U.S. needs and wishes."

Pappas' former staff director at the Esso-Pappas works in Greece, playboy Paul Totomis, is another known CIA agent. He became minister of public order immediately after the coup. The junta needed a civilian tinge and Totomis was one of the few the colonels could trust.

The CIA, thus articulated into the regime, may still consider Papadopolous as a puppet to be manipulated at will, but the dictator has not merely purged the armed forces of "unreliable" elements, he has built up a new, indoctrinated officer corps in his own image over the last six years —"as long as Hitler took to take over the German Army" remarks a gloomy ex-minister in Athens.

This observer, once whole-heartedly pro-American, told me that while it might be useful in the short run for the Pentagon to use Greece as a staging post in its ventures "we must ask ourselves about the long run — the kind of situation that makes the Vietnams of the world." He believes, too, that the Americans have given Papadopolous another clear assignment: to deliver up Cyprus, now an independent republic, so as to secure a further base in the Near East, and remove that bothersome neutralist, Makarios.

Not Easy to Shed Load

For the moment the U.S. must continue to back Papadopolous. Its commitment of men, money and principle is too great for sudden change. Indeed, Rogers fell over himself after last month's coup to deny that the U.S. would use current NATO talks to "influence the political process in Greece." How long this support may be maintained in the face of the turmoil and popular hostility in Greece is anyone's guess, but when and if the time comes to shed the load, it may not be easy.

The U.S. government is gravely shaken, its sundry secret services bedraggled and at odds. Papadopolous used this and the navy revolt to make his first independent move—"assuming" CIA approval for the deposition of the king. Having got away with it he will move towards his next goal—we may dismiss the promised elections as a farce—the life presidency. He hopes to rule unchallenged as did Greece's last dictator, General Metaxas, until his death in 1941.

Meanwhile, defence expenditure has soared. Britain, France and Germany compete to sell him arms. Greece, superficially, is thriving; it is strangely like Mussolini's Italy between the wars.

And, like that pasteboard Caesar, Papadopolous has expansionist aims. Who can tell, if he is permitted to snatch Cyprus, where he may turn next? He is, after all, an officer raised in the old school of the megali idea, the dream of a greater Greece.

Man May Plan His Own Death

By GILLIAN TINDALL
Manchester Guardian

Four or five years ago, people began pointing out that death has replaced sex as the great taboo subject of our society.

After a while they began pointing it out so frequently that the remark became a cliche in its own right — and one of those cliches which simply by reiteration in time become less true: Death is no longer an unmentionable topic if people do in fact keep mentioning it.

In the past two or three years, articles on the problems of the dying — what to tell them, what to tell their families, how to explain to children and so forth — have gradually made their appearance in newspapers of almost every level, and are no longer exceptional.

Several sociologists and doctors have published books on it for general consumption. Recently there was a TV documentary on bereavement, followed by a discussion the next day. Cruse, which is the organization for widows, is this summer running a series of seminars for people professionally concerned with helping the bereaved.

Today, not telling little Camilla the truth about Granny's disappearance would, among those aware of changing attitudes, be seen as old-fashioned, cowardly and plain misguided — just as wrong, in fact, as not telling her the truth about little Johnny's appearance.

More important, there is a growing body of opinion to the effect that Granny too needs to be let in on the truth about her own imminent disappearance, and allowed to talk about it if she wants without being made feel she is being indecent.

If the ethics of conversation about death are in process of change, more profoundly the ethics of the death situation itself are being scrutinized as never before; the word "euthanasia" has entered the public consciousness.

The past 12 months have seen a proliferation of conferences connected with the subject. The London Medical Group, which concerns itself with moral dilemmas in medicine, had a "Problem of Euthanasia" conference last summer; Cardinal Heenan called a conference in January on "The care of the dying" which received a good deal of press coverage; the Quakers are having their turn (with one of the same speakers) as "The care of the dying and bereaved."

One rather undesirable result of all this activity, particularly when a small clique begins to specialize in it, is that certain aspects of the subject become polarized — those "for" and "against" euthanasia, for example, are in danger of assuming falsely entrenched positions as the pro- and anti-abortion law reformers did five years ago.

Perhaps one should just regard this as a side-effect of a central movement toward honesty and clarification which is in itself desirable—indeed inevitable.

For the old idea that death comes when it will and we must just accept it, simply will not do any more. We have outgrown it— not because we have developed some gratuitous urge to "question time-honored values," but simply because in practical terms, our power over life and death has become enormously greater.

Modern medicine and surgery are here to stay. We can no more put the clock back to the time when a doctor could safely pull out all the stops to save anyone any time (safely, because he knew he couldn't do much anyway), than we can go back to the morally-easy bad old days when babies just arrived as a consequence of sex and there were not decisions or choices about it.

We have not deliberately sought self-determination on death, but some partial degree of self-determination is, willy-nilly, moving towards us.

In these changed conditions, old, straight-forward concepts of what is right become wilfully simplistic, a pretence at a clear-cut morality which in practice bucks the real issues.

The consultant at Great Ormond Street Hospital in London who, a few months ago, pointed out that to operate automatically on all spina bifida babies regardless of their condition is not necessarily either a moral or an honest procedure, was pointing out something which enormous numbers of people, both doctors and laymen, would rather not face but which is going to have to be faced all the time.

This article is not a piece of special pleading for "euthanasia" (a term of deplorably vague meaning in any case). Nothing is going to be improved just yet by some well-meant but artificial new legislation which would probably be open to abuse. What I personally hope for, and predict, is a gradual shift in our whole attitude to death, as a fact of living, and it is our own dying we must get into perspective first, rather than other people's.

Much of the present argument about suitable attitudes to death and the dying seems based on the highly questionable assumption that death must equal bad. But could it be that this, in fact, is the irrational taboo — an overall fearful and squeamish attitude to the sheer fact of death which makes honest discussion of it so difficult?

Many people today will reject out of hand, with an alarmed indignation, the very idea that possibly, within the next century, planning one's own death and helping others plan theirs will become as normal and accepted a burden of human responsibility in advanced societies as planning the birth of children.

But then how many people, even enlightened ones, a hundred years ago would have been able to envisage our revolutionized attitudes of sexual mores? Time brings death to us all — and it brings a lot of social changes, too. I rather hope I manage to see the beginning of this one come about: I think it will be interesting.

MB Labels Strike Illegal

PORT ALBERNI — A strike at MacMillan Bloedel's pulp and newsprint mill here was called "illegal job action" today by a company spokesman.

"The company views this as a most serious matter and appropriate action is under consideration," said B. I. Howe, vice-president of MacMillan Bloedel's pulp and paper group.

"No meetings are scheduled and none will be."

A dozen mill workers began picketing shortly before midnight Friday with signs reading, "no contract, no work." Graveyard and day shift workers refused to cross the picket line and the mill, which employs 1,100 men, closed down Friday morning.

Also affected are 240 men at the company's Somas A sawmill, which depends on the pulp and newsprint mill for steam power.

A union spokesman said the pulp and paper mill workers will meet Tuesday afternoon when results of a vote by 7,200 members of the United Paperworkers International Union at 11 mills, including Port Alberni, are known on a proposed new two-year contract.

Hijacked Meat Used to Open Roadside Stall

PENSACOLA, Fla. (AP) — A truck hijacked last week with 40,000 pounds of meat aboard was recovered after police received a tip that a roadside meat market was selling beef for 30 cents a pound.

Police said they received a tip Sunday that the market was operating outside the city at cut-rate prices. But by the time they arrived, police said, the operator had fled, leaving the truck behind with 20,000 pounds of meat inside.

Investigators said the truck was hijacked last Monday on a delivery run from Des Moines, Iowa, to Indianapolis, Ind.

Cong Admit Officers Held

Times News Services

SAIGON — The Viet Cong admitted today it is holding two Canadian officers who disappeared 10 days ago and Canadian chief delegate Michel Gauvin asked the International Commission of Control and Supervision to suspend all routine business until the missing officers are returned.

A press officer for the Provisional Revolutionary Government (the formal name for the Viet Cong) said Capts. Ian Patten, of Toronto and Fletcher Thomson of Ottawa are alive and well.

The PRG accused the South Vietnamese government of ordering all-day artillery fire on areas where the two Canadians were being searched for. Officials in Saigon termed this a slander.

An official Canadian statement said that the ICCS agreed at a meeting today to consider the request to suspend normal business until the men are returned, and to make a decision Wednesday.

The Canadian statement said that Gauvin told the Hungarian, Polish and Indonesian delegates that although today's statement by the Viet Cong was encouraging, it is still uncertain how or when the two will be released.

The Canadian statement said that the commission agreed to take note of the Canadian request, and today's regular meeting was adjourned until Wednesday when a decision will be taken.

In its statement, the Viet Cong said a report received in the capital today said two men calling themselves Canadians from a local ICCS team entered a Viet Cong zone in Long Khanh province June 28.

"Because they had received no advance notification from their superiors, the local administration thought these persons were sham ICCS members and they held them for investigation," a Viet Cong spokesman said.

The slowness of the release negotiations, as correspondents have pieced the story together since June 28 when Patten and Thomson disappeared, seemed to be caused by:

—Disagreement over who was responsible. Canadian authorities have maintained the two officers were simply touring their area of responsibility; the Viet Cong communique said today the two "went along with two Vietnamese, infiltrating into the liberated area without a PRG liaison officer . . . (and without) advance notification."

—Some concern by the PRG officers on the spot that the Canadians, on a previous visit to the area where they were captured, had inadvertently disclosed the location of the Viet Cong unit they visited, since their visit was followed by a heavy government attack.

BURGLAR GIZZMO BYPASSED ALARM

NEW YORK (UPI) — Police said thieves with "some type of electronic gizzmo" deactivated a burglar alarm and stole an estimated $500,000 worth of gold from a midtown jewelry manufacturer.

The thieves burned open two safes at the S. R. S. Casting Corp. and took the gold sheets and nuggets, police said today.

The theft was similar to one during the weekend in the Borough of Queens at a precious metal factory in which the thieves also deactivated an alarm system and stole a $500,000 worth of gold, silver and platinium.

The theft was discovered today but the shop had been closed for vacation since June 23 and it was not determined exactly when the theft took place.

Mining Shares Cut From 1,000 to 20

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

Buying 1,000 shares of McKinney Mines Inc. in 1967 might have seemed like a good idea at the time.

But two consolidations of the company — one in 1967 and the second just announced — have reduced those 1,000 shares to 20.

The Vancouver-based company is exploring for molybdenum in the Rossland area.

In March, 1967, the shares of the company were rolled back on a one-for-five basis (200 for each 1,000) to form Continental McKinney Mines.

The company has announced a further consolidation, to take place immediately, further reducing the shares on a one-for-10 basis (20 for each 200) to merge into a new company called Chandalar Resources Ltd.

Other firms merging with Continental McKinney to form Chandalar are Trinat Resources Ltd., Gundex Holdings Ltd. and Modoc Holdings Ltd.

All companies have ceased trading under their own names and shares will trade on the Vancouver Stock Exchange as Chandalar Resources.

Firms have their shares consolidated (reduced in number) so they can issue new shares and finance exploration activities.

Consolidation of shares is often the only alternative to a company declaring itself bankrupt and going out of existence.

Companies are consolidated at the average rate of two per month, 24 per year, on the Vancouver Stock Exchange.

Fiercest rollback in 1972 was Gem Explorations, leaving shareholders with 50 for each 1,000 originally purchased.

McKinney Mines has easily won the title of big disaster area of 1973 with its rollback of one-for-50.

Other VSE companies to be consolidated in June were Mollie Mac Mines Ltd. and New Cronin Babine Mines Ltd.

New Cronin Babine has changed to Sproat Silver Mines Ltd. with shareholders getting 250 shares of the new company for each 1,000 of the old firm.

Mollie Mac Mines Ltd. has become Kandahar Resources on a rather weird consolidation of one for 7½.

A Mollie Mac shareholder is left with the thankless job of trying to sell 133.33 shares, the residue per 1,000 of his former holdings. Partial shares cannot be sold and selling the 133 as a broken lot will also cost the owner from 15 to 20 per cent of the listed value of the shares.

Many shareholders find that such broken lots hardly pay the brokerage fees and upwards of a million shares of Mollie Mac may be stored away in attics as virtually worthless as a result of the consolidation.

WITNESSES JAM BORDER

VANCOUVER (CP) — A five-day assembly of more than 50,000 Jehovah's Witnesses ended Sunday night, and caused what officials at Canada-U.S. border points termed the worst traffic jams in history.

Cars were backed up for seven miles at the main British Columbia crossing 30 miles south of Vancouver leading to Blaine, Wash.

At border points further east, in the Fraser Valley, lineups were up to three miles long.

A U.S. customs officials at Blaine said 90 per cent of the traffic was Witnesses returning home.

Patrols Try to Assist Skid Road's Indians

VANCOUVER (CP) — Estimates of Vancouver's transient Indian population vary from 2,000 to 5,000 and only half of those who leave the reserves to find a better life in the city ever make it.

So says Lee Bobb, 23, assistant co-ordinator of the Native Information Centre in Vancouver. The centre, established in March, 1972 offers counselling, discussion groups, field trips, art and carving instruction and an employment and training service for Indians in Vancouver.

Three months ago the centre's staff of 15, eight of them women, began to go out on the streets in the downtown and East Hastings skid road areas, where Indians are a minority, to tell them about the service.

Most of the patrollers are aware of the problems faced by a newcomer because they have had to adjust to the city themselves. Walking in pairs, they approach Indians, introduce themselves, and offer assistance. They rotate street patrol duty in addition to work at the centre.

Ken Peters, 32, a counsellor in charge of the street patrol program, says about a third of the Indians they meet are in need of the centre's help.

"People are suspicious at first, but after a while they get to know us and a relationship of trust develops."

Recently an Indian baby died of pneumonia in a downtown hotel while his 15-year-old mother stayed drunk for two days and wasn't aware of his cries.

Workers at the centre are pursuing the case, but Mrs. Bobb says his death could have been prevented if they had been notified of the problem at once.

She is critical of the civil service attitude of most service agencies and urges they be humanized. She says referral agencies should be given more funding for street work.

Mrs. Bobb is also critical of the city's police force.

"Except for one or two officers, the rest of the force doesn't seem too concerned with helping people. They are more concerned with catching the law breakers," she says.

Ray Mousseau, a counsellor, says prejudice against Indians is common in British Columbia.

"There have been times when I heard people saying 'look at them Indians drinking in doorways.' They don't notice white people doing the same thing," he says.

Asamera

Asamera Oil Corp Ltd. reports a record annual net income of $2,756,760 or 38 cents a share for the year ended March 31, 1973. This compared with $1,843,955 or 25 cents a share last year.

Gross income for 1973 year was a record $11,683,436, up $2,119,871 over the 1972 figure of $9,563,565.

T. L. Brook, president of Asamera, said in his annual report the discovery of the new Tualang oil field in North Sumatra by the company's wholly-owned subsidiary, Asamera Oil (Indonesia) Ltd., contributed greatly to improving the financial picture. The discovery well was completed April 1, 1973, and nine additional wells have been drilled since, resulting in eight producers and a dry hole.

A substantial sales increase for Flank Oil Co., a wholly-owned subsidiary that markets oil, gas and diesel fuel in the United States, also contributed to the improved outlook, he said.

President Peter G. Ropchan says that life insurance sales for the company's subsidiary, The North West Life Assurance Company of Canada, increased from $11,128,000 in the first six months of 1972, to $22,225,000 for the comparable period this year. Premium income from these sales rose from $169,000 in 1972 to $329,000 in the same half of 1973.

Investment emphasis has been placed on mortgages, and the mortgage portfolio has been substantially increased. This investment program is expected to increase company investment earnings in the second half of 1973.

B.C. Forest Products

British Columbia Forest Products Ltd. has renamed its Youbou sawmill and veneer complex as Cowichan Wood Products Division.

Placed in charge of both mills at Youbou, near Duncan, is J. W. Warr, who was manager of the sawmill there.

Since its start in 1950, the veneer mill was operated as part of the Victoria plywood division, which used most of its production.

However, the mill now also supplies veneer to BCFP's plywood plant on Annacis Island, New Westminster, so administrative control has been centred in Youbou.

The two mills employ 550 persons.

NW Financial Corp.

NW Financial Corporation, Vancouver, reports a six-month profit of $342,802, an increase of $127,888 over the same perid in 1972. Earnings per share for the period were 15.7 cents, compared with 9.4 cents a year earlier, up by 67 per cent.

Oil Import Aim Altered

SEOUL (AP) — South Korea plans to import palm oil and other edible vegetable oils from Indonesia and Canada to substitute for tallow, on which the United States has imposed export controls, government officials said Monday.

The government also decided to lower import tariffs for these vegetable oils by 50 per cent to guarantee a smooth supply on the domestic market.

Korea needs to import 44,000 tons of tallow this year and has obtained 23,000 tons so far.

Searchers Find Downed Copter

VICTORIA (CP) — A commercial helicopter missing since Saturday in the remote grizzly Bear Lake area of the Yukon Territory was found Sunday and pilot Gordon Olliver, 31, alone in the craft, was reported safe.

Two aircraft and two helicopters from search and rescue headquarters were sent to the scene, about 150 miles west of the Yukon-Northwest Territories border, after Trans North Turbo Air reported one of its pilots missing.

The pilot flew a passenger from Grizzly Lake to another lake 60 miles north but became lost on the return flight in bad weather. He ran low on gas and decided to land the helicopter in a valley, officials said.

SALMO (CP) — Martin Walsh, general manager of this community's biggest industrial operation, Arve Cedar Mills Ltd., charged Saturday the mill was forced to shut down by the refusal of other forest companies in the area to make cedar logs available.

The mill shut down without warning Friday, leaving 168 persons jobless.

"It is a legal but deadly conspiracy among some of the other forestry interests around here that forced us to close down," said Walsh.

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Canadian Police Association voted at a conference here Saturday to ask the federal government to prescribe stiffer penalities for unlawful possession of weapons.

Delegates approved a recommendation to change the criminal code so that such offenses would be indictable, allowing harsher sentences.

Delegates expressed particular concern over possession of handguns, for which convictions usually bring only a slight fine.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Steps to ensure a continuing supply of residual fuel oil for all British Columbia industrial requirements until the year 2002 are recommended in a brief by the Council of Forest Industries to the B.C. Energy Commission.

The council will appear at a commission hearing in early August.

The brief says future supplies of residual oil could be affected by the United States energy crisis and adds that the forest industry is concerned about the reliability of the supply of its major fuel, about 70 per cent of which is imported from the U.S.

MISSION (CP) — Premier Dave Barrett officiated Saturday at the formal opening of the new Mission Bridge spanning the Fraser River about 40 miles east of Vancouver.

The new four-lane structure cost $12 million.

Murray Breaks Hammer Record After Glenda Snaps World Mark

Glenda hits tape in world record time

Murray Keating needed calming down.

There he was, with his hammer in the infield at Centennial Stadium, just dying to show his hometown crowd of about 1,400 what he could do.

Then it happened!

In a warmup, the wire on Keating's hammer — it's actually a 16-pound ball on the end of a cable — broke.

Keating admitted becoming excited. He stalked up and down muttering to himself and told officials at the Pacific International Games to go on with the event without him.

But Jean-Paul Baert of Montreal, Canada's head throwing coach, stepped in to pacify Keating; they managed to find him another wire for his hammer; and the Victoria athlete thrilled the crowd, alright.

Trailing Yoshihisa Ishida with only his final throw remaining, Keating whirled and sent the hammer soaring out to 64.28 metres (210 feet, 11 inches) to snatch the gold medal from his Japanese rival and smash the Canadian native record.

Keating, who already had a throw of 209 feet at a recent meet in California awaiting recognition, beat Gordon Geiger's listed native record by more than four feet.

MEDAL STANDINGS

	Gold	Silver	Bronze
United States	12	6	4
Australia	10	7	5
Canada	7	9	10
Japan	4	4	7
New Zealand	1	7	7
United Kingdom	—	1	—
Jamaica	—	—	1

It was a fine effort and the highlight of the second day of the five-nation track and field meet. But it didn't quite eclipse a fantastic performance on the opening day by slender 18-year-old Glenda Reiser.

Running almost alone and not pushed, the Ottawa girl set a world record for the mile with a time of 4:34.9 to beat the mark of 4:35.4 held by Ellen Tiddell of West Germany.

Miss Reiser streaked away from the high-class field to win by 30 yards from Thelma Wright of Vancouver with Anne Marie Davis of Winnipeg completing a 1-2-3 sweep for Canada.

It was certainly a great day Saturday for milers, with John Walker of New Zealand running the first sub-four-minute race in Victoria.

He won the first of two men's mile races in 3:58.8 and then fellow-New Zealander Rod Dixon bettered that mark by winning the second in 3:57.9. Dixon had to stage a thrilling finish, catching Peter Watson of Australia, who also broke the four-minute barrier, in 3.58.0, 20 yards from the line.

Two Australians set Canadian open records Saturday and another two open marks tumbled Sunday — again to Aussies.

Charlene Rendina won the women's 400 metres in 52.4 seconds and Robert Henly of Australia set a Canadian open record of 8 minutes, 29 seconds for the 3,000-metre steeplechase.

On Sunday, Gaye Dell of Australia set a Canadian open record in the 200-metre hurdles with a time of 26.3 seconds, beating the old mark of 26.6 held by former-Victorian Penny May. Jean Sparling of Vancouver was third and set a Canadian juvenile record of 27.1.

Sunday's other open record fell in the women's 4 x 400-metre relay when the strong Aussie team, anchored by double sprint winner Denise Robertson, won in 3:38.1, beating the mark of 3:38.9 set by Sweden.

Miss Robertson added the 200 metres in 23.5 seconds Sunday to her 100-metre victory Saturday.

American sprinters thrilled the crowd when they placed first in each of the four 200-metre heats and John Pettus just held out to beat Larry Brown and Willie Deckard in an exciting all-U.S. finish.

In other highlights Sunday, Bruce Simpson of Canada cleared 16 feet, 10¾ inches to win the pole vault; Hiroko Yamashita of Japan beat Canada's Brenda Eisler by only an inch and-a-quarter to win the women's long jump with 20 feet, 3¾ inches; and John Hawkins of Courtenay placed second in the high jump.

Hawkins actually jumped the same height as the winner — Lawrence Peckham of Australia — but he cleared 7 feet, ⅝ inches on his final attempt and Peckham took first place by clearing it on his second bid.

Canada, which took five gold medals Saturday, picked up only two more Sunday as the Americans and Australians took over, winning seven golds apiece.

The U.S. topped the gold medal table for the two days with 12 while the Aussies were second with 10 and Canada third with seven. Counting gold, silver and bronze medals, the Canadian team, bolstered from the squad that competed in the Pacific Conference Games in Toronto by several B.C. athletes, finished first with 26 medals while the U.S. and Australia were tied with 22 each. Japan and New Zealand had 15 medals each.

It was a great meet and a credit to director Ron Bowker and his assistants. But for co-sponsors Invictus and the Saanich Peninsula Jaycees, it was a financial headache. Only 900 paid to watch under mainly grey skies Saturday and on Sunday the sun brought out 1,400 to the stand and about another 500 who got a peep through the fence.

'Old Lady' Eyes Bobby

The "Old Lady" of tennis, after wrapping up her fifth Wimbledon singles title and capturing two other crowns at the London Club's big annual event, now would like to wrap up Billy Riggs.

Billie Jean King of Long Beach, Calif., who at 29 calls herself the "old lady" of the sport she continues to dominate, said when the 1973 Wimbeldon championships ended Sunday: "That's three more Wimbledon titles; now for Bobby Riggs."

The 55-year-old Riggs, winner of the Wimbledon men's crown in 1939, easily defeated Australian Margaret Court earlier this year in a $10,000 challenge match and has challenged Mrs. King.

Billie Jean, who beat fellow-American Chris Evert for the singles title, then teamed with Rosemary Casals of San Francisco to win her ninth women's doubles crown Saturday; she added the mixed doubles title — her third — Sunday when she and Australian Owen Davidson whipped Raul Ramirez of Mexico and Janet Newberry of the U.S., 6-3, 6-2.

In all, it has meant 17 Wimbledon crowns for Mrs. King, who has swept the three titles on two occasions.

Cubans Trim Canadians

HAVANA, (Reuter) — Canada was defeated 97-66 by a strong Cuban team in the Havana basketball tournament Saturday.

A record crowd at the Ciudad Deportiva saw a lacklustre performance by the Canadians, who said after the game that they had played badly.

It was a disappointing result for Canadian coach Jack Donohue, who saw his club trim the Cuban "B" squad 83-48 Friday in a strong performance. Earlier the Canadians had defeated Bulgaria and Czechoslovakia while losing to Russia and Yugoslavia.

Mike and Sue Belton of the Burnside Lawn Bowling Club Sunday edged Paul Jenkins and Rae Martin of the Victoria West club 19-17 to win the Walter Cross mixed-pairs trophy.

Kustaski Scores Four; McDonalds Boost Lead

With a little weekend help from Richmond Roadrunners and Surrey Salmonbellies, Victoria McDonalds Sunday night boosted their lead over Burnaby Cablevision in the Pacific Junior "A" Lacrosse League from six to 10 points.

McDonalds thrilled the crowd of 1,122, largest to watch a Junior "A" game at Memorial Arena this season, with a 16-13 win over Coquitlam J-Hawks.

Meanwhile, Salmonbellies were handling Burnaby its second defeat in two nights with a 17-11 victory in Burnaby. The Cablevision team was beaten 16-8 Saturday night by last-place Richmond.

Jerry Kustaski scored four goals and Danny Green had three for McDonalds, who trailed 4-3 after the first period and held a 9-8 lead going into the final 20 minutes.

Jim Lynch and Lori Gloeckner scored two goals each for McDonalds. Other scorers were Glen Neuman, Rick Baker, Jeevan Dillon, Rick Sage and Mike Yaeger. Neuman also had six assists, Green five and Lynch four.

Harry Powless scored four goals and added four assists to lead Coquitlam.

Victoria scored four power-play goals and got another three markers while playing short-handed.

Bill Robertson started in goal for Victoria and played his first full game of the season — or almost. He was relieved for five minutes in the third period by regular goalkeeper John Hamilton to change his pads.

Robertson finished with 40 saves.

Victoria would have had a far greater margin than three goals but for a fine effort in goal by Coquitlam's Al Girard, who made 58 saves. He faced 30 shots in a hectic third period, when the score was tied twice, and he stopped 23 of them.

Aaron Hits Pair; Trails by 18

By The Associated Press

Hank Aaron made his final 1973 regular season appearance in New York a memorable one, blasting his 694th and 695th career home runs to give Atlanta Braves a 4-2 victory over New York Mets in a National League baseball game Sunday.

The 39-year-old Aaron hit both homers off former teammate George Stone, with one coming in the fourth and the other in the sixth after a walk to Darrell Evans.

The homers gave Aaron 23 for the season and left him only 18 short of Babe Ruth's major league baseball record 714 on the all-time home run list.

In other National League games, Houston scored the tie-breaking run in the ninth inning to beat Montreal 9-7, San Diego defeated the Chicago Cubs 4-2, Johnny Bench led Cincinnati to a 4-0 victory over Philadelphia, Los Angeles defeated Pittsburgh 3-2 in 12 innings and San Francisco edged St. Louis 5-4.

In Sunday's American League games, New York Yankees defeated Minnesota Twins 7-0, Detroit Tigers shut out Kansas City Royals 3-0, California Angels topped Cleveland Indians 10-4 and 5-3, Milwaukee Brewers downed Texas Rangers 6-4 and 7-3, Baltimore Orioles edged Oakland A's 6-5, and Chicago White Sox downed Boston Red Sox 6-1 in the first game of a doubleheader, then lost the second game 11-2.

On Sunday, Cesar Cedeno hit two home runs and scored the tie-breaking run in the ninth for the Astros over the Expos in a game marred by a collision which left Expos shortstop Tim Foli with a broken jaw.

Foli was hurt in the fourth inning when he collided with Bob Watson while attempting a tag play.

Pinch-hitter Chris Arnold, given a second chance when first baseman Tim McCarver muffed his foul pop, lofted a sacrifice fly in the seventh which provided the margin of victory for the Giants. (See scores page 11).

Upsets Mark Tourney

Unranked Trevor Jones knocked top-seeded defending champion Marty Taylor out with a shock 7-5, 6-7, 6-3 first-round men's singles victory when the Victoria City open tennis championships got under way at the weekend.

And that was by no means the only upset.

Eighth-seeded Ivor Goodmanson eliminated fourth-seeded Tony Simnett 6-4, 6-4 in the quarter-finals and unseeded Tim Cummings beat seventh-seeded Bob Hutton 7-5, 6-3.

Cummings was later beaten 6-4, 6-4 in the quarter-finals by third-ranked Greg Miller, who joined Goodmanson in the semi-finals.

Sixth-seeded Peter Bousefield was also ousted when he injured a leg and had to withdraw after losing the first set, 6-4, to Bob McCold.

Everything went according to seedings in the men's doubles and the women's singles, but in the women's doubles, youngsters Nina and Jennifer Bland shocked second-seeded Wendy and Lori Barlow 7-6, 6-1.

Play continues at 5:30 p.m. today and all players should check with the Racquet Club of Victoria to find out playing times.

Ken Floyd, Dave Mick Earn Berths on Provincial Team

JOHN RUSSELL
. . . 11th time on team.

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Two university students from Victoria have earned positions on this year's provincial Willingdon Cup golf team.

Dave Mick of the Gorge Vale course and Ken Floyd of Colwood Sunday nailed down places on the four-man squad that will defend the inter-provincial championship at the Toronto Summit Club on Aug. 6 and 7.

Scores used to decide the B.C. team were from the four rounds of the B.C. amateur championship at Capilano in Vancouver and a 36-hole invitational trial here during the weekend at the Gorge and Royal Colwood layouts.

Leading the trials, which concluded at Colwood Sunday, was defending national champion Doug Roxburgh of Vancouver. He fired a 74 to go with a 69 at Gorge Vale Saturday for a 36-hole total of 143 and an over-all trial score of 428, 11 strokes better than Mick.

Other member of the team is veteran John Russell of Vancouver, who qualified for the 11th time. He had 76-74—140 and a final total of 440, the same as Floyd.

Actually Floyd, second only to Roxburgh in play at Gorge Vale and Colwood, was the most consistent player with a pair of 72s.

It is his first selection as a provincial representative. For Roxborough, it is his fifth. For Mick, his third time on the team, which will have Bob Mitchell of Vancouver Langara as the alternate and Ben Parson, a B.C. Golf Association official from Vancouver, as non-playing captain.

Floyd gave credit for his improved play—he was seventh in last year's trials—to "thinking better on the course and improved putting."

"I'm not missing many of those short putts this year," he said, while adding that he

Two of Mick's rounds were 74 and he had received valuable assistance from veteran amateur Lawrie Kerr.

Actually, when Sunday's trials started at Colwood started, it was almost a foregone conclusion that Roxburgh, Mick and Russell would be in, and that the real fight was between Floyd, Mitchell and Harry White of Marine Drive, a member of last year's Willingdon Cup team. Floyd led Mitchell by two and White by three.

Teeing off on the fifth, Floyd was two over and Mitchell had crept to within one stroke. But Floyd soon put a stop to that threat. He birdied seven and eight to go three up and when Mitchell went over the green on nine, into heavy grass, was forced to take a penalty stroke, and ended with a double-bogey six, Floyd was four up and "home free" as it turned out. White never did get untracked and finished with a 79 and a six-round total of 450, five strokes behind Mitchell, who was five behind Floyd and Russell.

Cec Ferguson of Gregarah had the best round of the day, a par 70. "I'll be back next year," he said. Bob Watson of Surrey had a 72, the same as Floyd. Nobody else was below 74.

Jim Nelford of Pitt Meadows, the B.C. junior champ, topped the junior playoff with a 78-76—154 and a final total of 466. Rick Donaldson of Capilano was second with 76-77—153, best junior score of the weekend, and 451 for the six rounds. Alan Swope of Pitt Meadows was third with 454 and Lee Haskell of Uplands fourth with 459.

These four players were named to the B.C. team to play in the junior interprovincial matches at Fredericton, New Brunswick, Aug. 20 and 21. Bruce Sangster, B.C. Golf Association president, is non-playing captain.

Alternate is Sandy Harper of Nanaimo, who put together a pair of 77s for a 461 total. Harper was named to the B.C. "B" team which will meet Alberta in Vancouver later this month. Other members of the B.C. side are Gordon Harder, Vancouver 463; Laurie Peet, Cowichan, 467 and Russ Jordan, Vancouver, 467. Alternate is Craig Carmichael of North Vancouver, 468.

Farmers Topple Trailers Twice

Farmer Construction extended its lead in the Victoria Senior Baseball League by sweeping a Sunday doubleheader against cellar-dwelling Greaves Movers at Lambrick Park.

Farmers won the opening contest 4-2 in nine innings and then took the second encounter, 7-1.

Terry Karpiuk, who finished with four hits in four trips to the plate, gave Greaves an extra lease on life in the opener with a two-out home run in the bottom of the seventh inning to send the game into extra innings.

In the ninth inning, Farmers' George Pakos led off with a double and counted the winning run on a triple by Dave McDonald, who later scored on an error.

Randy Johnson was two-for-four and Pakos was two-for-three in the second game.

Karpiuk, the second-game pitching loser, had a two-for-three batting performance in the nightcap and scored all three Greaves runs in the two games.

The TX500 stands out-even among other Yamahas!

Even when it's compared to its own team-mates, the DOHC, 8-valve per cylinder, four-stroke TX 500 still brings comments like: "I've never seen a bike this smooth!" "The acceleration is . . . absolutely fantastic!" "The balance is unbelievable. It handles . . . well, perfectly! There's no other word for it!"
And, if the TX 500 is that outstanding among Yamahas, imagine what it will do to the competition! Better still, try it — and see for yourself.

Crowell Enjoys Big Weekend On Midget Scene

Palmer Crowell of Tillamook, Ore., walked off with a major share of laurels during two Washington Midget Racing Association events at the weekend on Vancouver Island.

Crowell, who drives a $19,000, bright-red, Offenhouser-powered machine, owned and built by Gordie Reelie of Vancouver, won the main events Sunday at Nanaimo's Grandview bowl and Saturday at Victoria's Western Speedway.

During time trial before a crowd of 2,267 fans at Western, Crowell broke the track record for midgets with a time of 16.86 seconds for one lap of the four-tenths of a mile oval.

He placed second in the "A" trophy days and won the fast heat.

Starting from the back of the 21-car pack in the 35-lap feature, Crowell made it to the front on the 18th lap and slowly pulled away.

Runner-up Don Vincent of Tacoma was just rounding the number-two turn when Crowell crossed the finish line.

In Nanaimo, Crowell also won the trophy dash, placed third in a close fast heat and recorded fast time of 15.80 for the ¼-mile track. This time was only half a second off the all-time track record, set by Roy Smith of Victoria in a super-modified.

Saturday's results:

"A" Trophy Dash: 1. Sonny Hanson, Seattle; 2. Palmer Crowell, Tillamook, Ore.; 3. Ron Roberts, Seattle; 4. Eddie Schefchek, Puyallup, Wash.

"B" Trophy Dash: 1. Fuzz Graham, Tacoma; 2. Jim Hendricks, Puyallup; 3. Dick Morrison, Puyallup.

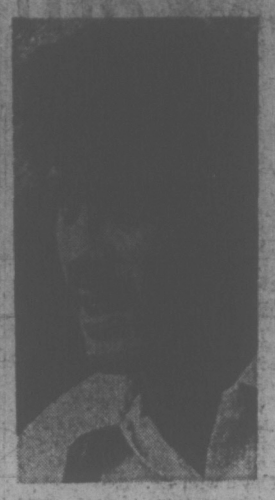
"C" Trophy Dash: 1. Don Robinson, Sacramento, Calif.; 2. Dick Gibson, Portland; 3. Rick Holthusen, Puyallup; 4. Gordon Kidder, Tacoma.

First heat: 1. Bill Hall, Burnaby; 2. Gordon Kidder; 3. Hap Kemp, Lacey, Wash.

Second heat: 1. Don Powell, Bellevue, Wash.; 2. Jim Hendricks; 3. Dave Smelser, Sumner, Wash.; 4. Buck Russow, Salem, Ore.

Fast heat: 1. Palmer Crowell; 2. Don Vincent, Tacoma; 3. Fuzz Graham; 4. Ron Roberts.

Main event: 1. Palmer Crowell; 2. Fuzz Graham; 3. Jim Hendricks; 4. Buck Russow.



FIRST VICTORY as golf professional was recorded Saturday at Winnipeg by Gar Hamilton (above), who won Manitoba Open title on first hole of playoff when veteran Moe Norman of Gilford, Ont., three-putted for bogey. Hamilton, 23-year-old Canadian tour rookie from Toronto, earned $1,800 and berth in Canadian Open. Norman and Hamilton each finished 54-hole tourney with four-under-par tally of 212, one shot ahead of Kitchener pro Bill Tape. George Shortridge of Minneapolis was fourth at 216.

Dave Survives Shaky Finish

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Former PGA champion Dave Stockton scrambled home with a front-running 73 Sunday for a one-stroke victory in the Greater Milwaukee Open golf tournament.

The 32-year-old Stockton acquired the sixth victory of his pro career and a $26,000 first-place cheque on his total of 276, 12 under par on the 7,010-yard Tuckaway Country Club course.

Hubert Green and Honero Blancas tied for second, one stroke off the pace, after each forged a four-under-par 68 in the muggy, steamy heat.

George Knudson of Toronto with a 67, followed at 278 and veteran Bob Goalby was one more back at 279 after a final 74 that included a killing triple-bogey six.

Veteran Charlie Sifford had the best round of the day, a 66, and was tied at 280 with Buddy Allin.

Stockton, who won the first Milwaukee Open in 1968 and later won the PGA national championship, was a front-runner in this one since the second round, when he fashioned a career-best 63, nine under par.

He opened the final day with a two-stroke lead over Goalby, saw the margin increase to five strokes at the turn, then had to hang on for dear life in the fight down the stretch.

Green, the lanky, laconic winner of the Tallahassee Open earlier this season, closed up with consecutive birdies on the 11th and 12th hole.

Blancas, paired with Stockton in the last group on the course, birdied the par five 12th and closed to within two with another bird on the 15th.

Stockton bogeyed the 17th when he missed the green and suddenly had a single stroke lead. Blancas needed only a birdie on the final hole to tie and force a playoff.

He put his drive in the rough and his approach into a bunker. He almost holed his sand shot but had to settle for a par and Stockton two-putted from some 30 feet for the par that won it.

SOCCER LINEUP SETTLED

VANCOUVER — Encompassing 73 teams in seven divisions, the British Columbia Soccer League has become a reality with the recent amalgamation of all senior soccer leagues in the province — including the Pacific Coast, Mainland and Inter-City loops.

Victoria Gorge Moisons and London Boxing Club (formerly Victoria West-United) join North Shore United, University of British Columbia Thunderbirds and Westminster Blues, all ex-PCSL squads, in the new setup.

Rounding out the Premier Division are Simon Fraser University, Vancouver Sport Club, Hungarian Turul, Inter-Italia, Greek Olympics, Pegasus (formerly Norburn) and Olympics.

Gordon Fraser of the Inter-City League was named president for a one-year term while Fred Whitaker of the PCSL was elected vice-presideent for two years. Directors, also from Vancouver, are Andy Stefanucci, George Hrennikoff, John Misera, Neil Willis, John Enwright, Dennis Lewis and Jack Stoten.

TOM MORRIS BIKE WINNER

SQUAMISH (CP) — Tom Morris of Victoria finished two seconds ahead of Bill Wild of Coquitlam to win the "A" class of the three-stage, 153-mile West Vancouver-Garibaldi bicycle race Sunday.

The winning time was six hours, 39 minutes, 16 seconds.

In the "B" class, Chris Shale of Coquitlam finished first, with George Allan of Victoria second. Joe Barrett of Victoria was third.

Victoria Cricketers Crush Vancouver Team in Trial

Victoria defeated Vancouver by 10 wickets Sunday in a Canada cricket trial match at Beacon Hill Park.

Vancouver batted first and reached 109 against the bowling of Alec Porter, who took four wickets for the cost of only 24 runs, and Kortwright Richards, who toppled three for 30.

Dave Clarke (73, not out) and Keith Dixon (34, not out) set the pace when Victoria went to bat and the home side finished with 110 for the loss of no wickets.

In Victoria and District League matches Saturday, brothers Tim and Peter Lord supplied most of the runs for the home side as Cowichan drew with visiting Castaways; Albion extended its lead by nipping second-place Incogs at Beacon Hill Park, and Alcos moved out of last place with a 59-run victory over Oak Bay at Windsor Park.

Tim Lord scored 106, not out, and Peter added 60 as Cowichan ran up 182 for five. Castaways had 117 for six.

Albion scored 81, all out, and held Incogs to 75, all out. Porter, who captured nine wickets for 32 runs, reached the 50-wicket mark for the season.

Power Pays For Seaboard

Power hitting proved to be the key Sunday for Seaboard Construction in a pair of Stuffy McGinnis Softball League victories.

Seaboard blanked CFB Esquimalt 2-0 in the afternoon contest at Heywood Park and then nipped Sooke Merchants 3-2 in the afternoon at Central Park.

Leadoff home runs by Brian Grexton in the second inning and Mike Taaffe in the fourth supplied all the Seaboard runs in the first encounter.

Scott Sinclair slammed a two-run homer with one out in the first inning of the game against Sooke and Taaffe followed with a triple before scoring on Grexton's single.

Alden Govenlock supplied both runs for Sooke with bases-empty homers.

The two victories boosted runner-up Seaboard one-half game closer to leading Century Inn, which topped Port Angeles 5-2 in one of the other Sunday games at Central.

In other games, Royal Oak Sporting Goods topped Port Angeles 4-1 and Port Angeles beat Six Mile House 5-2 at Central while Labatts bumped Royal Oak 4-1 at Heywood.

If Mother Nature had her way, this young sprout wouldn't have much chance.

A young Douglas Fir trying to grow up inside a forest will probably never make it. It will either become stunted or die, because a Douglas Fir cannot grow tall and strong in the shade of other trees. In the constant battle for life-giving sunlight, millions of trees will continue to lose until Mother Nature gives them a chance. Or, until we do.

Nature's life cycle: it includes death, decay and waste.

Trees, like all other living things, ultimately die. The life cycle may encompass hundreds of years, yet, after maturing, the tree slowly, imperceptibly becomes senile or "decadent". During these twilight years, the old tree is beset by foes: insect infestation, disease, windstorms—foes which the tree no longer has the strength or vitality to endure.

In the rain belt areas of B.C. species such as Hemlock and Cedar—"shade tolerant" trees—become decayed and fall, one by one. As each tree dies, another of its kind takes its place and begins to grow, even though shaded by other trees. Thus, as space becomes available in this particular environment, the forest is constantly renewed, one tree at a time.

However, in other forest areas of B.C. where stands of Douglas Fir predominate, Nature terminated the life cycle in a sudden, wide-spread catastrophe. Every two hundred years or so, prior to man's intervention, holocaustic fires — usually caused by lightning—would wipe out entire generations of mature trees, thereby opening the land to sunshine. In this way, a new generation of fir trees was given a chance to live. The new seedlings, at last unshaded and unopposed, began to reach for the sun, and a new forest was born.

The life cycle (revised): it includes a useful harvest.

Man has learned how to interrupt the natural life cycle of the forest—and how to complete it, as well. Instead of allowing mature trees to fall and decay, or to go up in smoke, we harvest them at their prime and put the resulting forest products to a myriad of good uses. Then, to complete the cycle, we plant new trees—a new generation living hundreds of years ahead of its time. And what a new generation it is!

Man-made trees: going Nature one better.

The seedling you see in the picture is a product of years of research and experimentation. It is the offspring of a genetically superior parent tree and it represents only one phase in our search for "the perfect tree".

This search, a result of close co-operation between the forest service and the forest industry, will eventually lead us to many species of stronger, healthier trees—a forest of them.

Yes, a forest. Because that seedling is not alone. It's only one of the 415 million new trees now planted throughout B.C. By the end of 1973, that number will increase to 490 million and, by 1980, government and industry will plant 150 million new trees a year—every year. And that's not counting the millions of new trees planted by Nature herself.

You can bet that seedling has a chance to survive. The forest industry of B.C. is betting on it. Not just because the forest is our business, but because we've made it our business to make sure the forest will always be there. For all of us.

Bureau Closing Decried

It would be "just ridiculous" to let the Victoria Visitors and Convention Bureau close in September as scheduled, says Empress Hotel manager W. A. Gray.

He said the four core municipalities should band together to save the bureau by agreeing to a new financing formula.

The bureau on the Causeway is scheduled to close in September in a controversy over lack of financial support.

Gray said he is encouraged that the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is looking for a solution to the stalemate over financing the bureau, although he hoped the chamber would not try to run the bureau without municipal assistance.

Meanwhile the Central Business District advisory committee to city council met at noon today to discuss the future of the visitor's bureau.

Victoria alderman Bill Tindall gave the committee assurances that the matter had not been dropped.

"I would suggest to you that in the very near future there will be a representative committee struck," he said, adding that its function would be to consider continuation of the bureau's function.

Gray, who succeeded Louis Finamore as Empress manager in March, had been manager of the Saskatchewan Hotel in Regina for three years before coming here.

He said he approved of the system in Regina where the tourist office was handled by the Chamber of Commerce but financed jointly with provincial and municipal assistance.

In the Victoria area, large grants should come from Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt as well as Victoria because all areas benefit from the tourist industry, he said.

Victoria officials have complained that they had been shouldering the lion's share of the costs of the bureau while other municipalities and private companies have not been paying a fair share.

Gray said The Empress is pleased to pay part of the costs of the bureau, although it does not benefit directly from the bureau's activities.

He said the hotel gets its customers through international advertising and its sales staff.

VANISHING BREED in the wake of changing commercial development is shoe repair man Herbert Davies, waiting on customer (above) in his shop on Johnson Street. Davies' rent will more than double next month and he fears it may force him out of business after 45 years.

45 Years Mending Soles —Then the Rent Doubles

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The brightly-colored world of boutiques and craft shops, evolving in Victoria with the restoration of old buildings, has a dull grey side unnoticed in the rush of commercial development.

It's the world of people like Herbert Davies, a man who has spent 45 years mending soles and stitching heels in the business of shoe repair.

The rent on Davies' one-man shop, Arcadia Shoe Repairs on Johnson Street, will more than double next month and Davies simply cannot afford it. He fears he'll be forced to go on welfare.

His new landlord, Mike Williams, bought the two buildings which form the Duck Block on the corner of Johnson and Broad about two weeks ago. All the businesses and apartments in the block not on a lease will have rental increases ranging from 50 to 200 per cent.

Williams, who explains his main interest in old buildings is to restore them, says the buildings' rents are "ridiculously low" now and the increases will bring them up to the level of other rents in the area.

Davies, who had been paying $100 a month rent for his small repair shop, says he'll pay the new $220 rent for the month of August but after that will start looking for a new shop or a new job.

He doesn't think he will find either.

"It's $1,440 a year extra in rent and I'd have to increase my business 25 per cent just to cover the increase," Davies says.

"I'm too old to work six days a week after 45 years of standing on my feet eight hours a day every working day. I try to look for another job, but it's pretty tough when I have no experience in any other line. I tried four years ago and found I was too old."

If Davies gives up the shop, he won't receive much return on the $10,000 he's invested over the years in equipment.

"I wouldn't get more than $2,000 or $2,500 for it now. No young people are taking up the business," he says.

According to the Better Business Bureau, there is no legislation governing rents on commercial properties.

Williams bought the block for $280,000 from Oak Bay tailor Joe Grosso, who purchased it 18 months ago for $205,000. The block, therefore, has increased in value nearly 37 per cent.

The new landlord says the trend in developing old buildings is "going to go right through Old Town" and a lot of small businesses in the area aren't operating efficiently. Therefore, he says, they won't be able to survive.

Davies "is probably an old-time shoe repair man who hasn't moved with the times," Williams says. "You'll probably find other shops in the area are more progressive. That does not mean they're better, but means they're more attractive to customers."

Grosso, the previous owner, says the rents he was charging were high enough to satisfy him but admits the people in the block "were getting away with murder" with such low rents.

The shoe repair man was perhaps the only exception, Grosso said, because he felt his tiny shop would not be suitable for any other kind of business.

The buildings, he said, are far behind and "new blood and new ideas" were bound to come in eventually.

"It's a changing world and many of us get caught," Grosso said.

So Davies keeps working in his shop, counting the days until he has to leave.

Williams says he's offered to help the repair man find a new shop, but rents in town will probably be too steep. Out of town, Davies might lose his regular customers.

"I like my work," Davies says, looking over the stacks of old boots, shoes and torn sandals waiting to be repaired. "I'd like to make a living at it. I just can't see getting a job as a janitor — or else I'll have to go on welfare."

More Report Cards

A new report card system featuring "frequent reporting" and evaluation of each child according to his own capabilities has been proposed by Hillcrest Elementary School.

The proposal, which will apply to Grades 4 to 7 at the school, will be discussed by Greater Victoria school board tonight.

Report cards would be sent home eight times a year and parents would be allowed to keep the cards with the teacher retaining a carbon copy.

Two sections of evaluation are included on the card. One is a check list of items indicating the child's achievement in relationship to what the teacher believes to be the child's capabilities. The other would show better grade marks indicating the child's achievement in relation to others in the class.

Space would be available for teachers to add written comments. And parent-teacher interviews could still be set up.

Hillcrest principal Don Henderson told the board in a letter that teachers at the school participated in drafting the reporting plan. "Staff opinion supports this request," the letter said.

Parents at the school also support the proposal, Henderson said, referring to results of a survey of 180 families.

Deal Claimed With Police

A crown witness in a heroin conspiracy trial testified today she made "a deal" with police before she began to sell heroin for one of the alleged conspirators.

Linda Marie Anderson, 21, of Edmonton, admitted to selling heroin supplied by Michael Kincses, 27, from a unit at the Fort Victoria Motel, 341 Island Highway.

Kincses and Wendy Dance, 25, Daniel Hadden, 57, and Robert Langer, 30, are standing trial before Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake on charges of conspiracy to traffic in heroin and possession of heroin for trafficking.

Anderson said she was living at the Chandler Hotel with a man named Jim Condon in July and August of last year.

She told Condon she was thinking of selling heroin.

She was visiting Condon at Victoria police station in early September when she was approached by police officers who wanted "information."

"And you were given assurances?" asked Robert Price, defending Kincses and Dance.

"Not really," she replied.

Price asked how the police would have known she was thinking of trafficking.

The police indicated they had been told by Condon, she testified.

Price suggested the police assured her she would not be charged if she co-operated.

"You decided upon the suggestion of the police to become involved in this, is that not right?" asked Price.

"Yes," she replied, but added she had made the decision before then.

The woman told the court she wasn't guaranteed "amnesty" by the police.

Reading her testimony concerning the alleged deal from the preliminary hearing transcript, Price said "that was the price of your testimony?"

"Yes," Price quoted.

"And to date you have not been charged?" asked Price.

"No."

The trial is continuing.

WITNESSES FORCE CHICAGO DETOUR

Chicago, the American rock group, ended up sleeping at The Empress this weekend because there was no room at any Vancouver inns.

The seven-man group gave a concert in Vancouver but discovered that all the hotel space was occupied by thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses.

About 60,000 Witnesses were attending the mammoth Divine Victoria International Assembly at the Empire Stadium and Pacific Coliseum, which ended Sunday.

So Chicago flew over in their private plane to stay at The Empress Friday and Saturday night. The group is performing tonight at the Seattle Coliseum.

Paul Speaks For Indians

Chief Philip Paul will represent Indians at both provincial and national Man and Resources conferences being held this fall.

Paul was selected by the Union of B.C. Indian chiefs to attend the provincial meeting in Naramata Sept. 20-23 and the national meeting Nov. 18-22 in Toronto.

Other Victoria area residents who will be delegates at both conferences are Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional District board, Derrick Mallard of CASE (Citizens Association to Save the Environment), Howard English of the B.C. Wildlife Federation and Gloria Williams of Sooke.

Attending only the provincial meeting from this area are Laurie Cottrell, Art Gahan, Hal Knight, Molly Phillips, Mac Tipton, Chris Anderson, Kay Dixon, Val Gislason, Steve Quinn, Menno Tromp, George Atamanenko, Mrs. George Durand, Dr. Kemble Greenwood, Les Mazer, Larry Tickner and Rients van Goudoever.

Task force delegates from Victoria who have been preparing reports on resource issues and will be attending the provincial conference are Edith Bettison, Alan Austin, Frank Leversedge, Dr. Kemble Greenwood, Colin Campbell, Don Benn and Ted Frechette.

Bettison also will attend the national conference.

The nationwide Man and Resources program is sponsored by the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers.

Yellow Car Linked To Holdup

A yellow car found in Saanich Saturday is believed to have been used in a $200 robbery Friday at the Elk Lake Grocery Store, 5450 Pat Bay Highway, police report.

The car was stolen July 6 from the corner of Fisgard and Government, but police would not specify where it was recovered.

Their search continues for a heavy-set young man in his early 20s who walked into the store demanding all the money in the till.

Exams Studied For Mechanics

A move to require all car mechanics to hold tradesmen's tickets will go before a public hearing of the Provincial Apprenticeship Committee in Vancouver Aug. 6.

The official notice today of the public hearing said it is "for the purpose of considering the compulsory certification of tradesmen in the trade of automotive mechanical repair throughout the entire province."

The trade is defined as meaning "the repair, adjustment and replacement of mechanical and electrical parts of automobiles, trucks and buses."

A labor department spokesman said the move, if approved, would "technically" require all car mechanics to hold a tradesmen's ticket under the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act.

However, he said allowances could be made "for special circumstances." He added that the car mechanics' trade for years has had a voluntary certification for tradesmen.

Written submissions may be made to John Melville, chairman of the Provincial Apprenticeship Committee, at the B.C. labor department office in Vancouver where the public hearing will be held.

Student Voice Wins Backing

An invitation to school students to express their opinions on how B.C.'s education system could be improved has been received enthusiastically by local school board chairmen.

"There's definitely merit in getting the opinions of high school students — after all, they are the consumers of education and, really, they must have a say in what they're getting," Saanich school board chairman Rubymay Parrott said today.

She was responding to an anouncement by Education Commissioner John Bremer that students in B.C.'s schools would be invited to form study groups "to conduct inquiries into any aspect of the educational process that they might consider to be of concern and to submit recommendations for change and improvement."

Parrott said it would be most important to talk to high school students but younger students could express their opinions as well, provided the information was "well sifted."

"It's good that he (Bremer) is going to talk to people from all walks of life," Parrott said, adding that retired people could make an interesting contribution to the commissioner's three-year study of education.

Victoria's school board chairman Peter Bunn said the idea of gathering student opinion was "excellent" provided the study groups don't become simply "beef groups."

"I would hope some appreciation of the job done by teachers would come out of the groups as well," he said.

The groups, he said, probably would eventually be dominated by more articulate, more militant students.

"The centre-of-the-line, sensible thinking kid probably won't get as much input," he said.

Parrott said she didn't feel more militant students would dominate the study and added that schools today would not have any trouble finding students to express their opinions openly.

Sooke school board chairman Fred Willway could not be reached for comment.

Intensity of Human Suffering Carried in Lotta's Message

How would you like to live with some 3,305 families on little more than four acres of land? to rub shoulders every hour of every day with 11,515 adults and children, including 1,044 little ones under six — all hungry?

There are no such living experiences anywhere in Canada. Nor, for that matter in all of North America. So, no doubt, you are wondering what I am trying to say.

It is that there are people in this world living under such conditions. In Vietnam, for instance, where that kind of human suffering is so immense and so personal, Dr. Lottta Hitschmanova of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada reports, after a personal visit there "that it cannot possibly be conveyed in cold, everyday words."

In a letter received awhile back, this dynamic woman who is dedicated to helping the abandoned and the homeless wherever war and famine holds way, says "this is my fourth survey but never have I been gripped more painfully by the immense tragedy of that unhappy land.

"Perhaps because the scars of war are more obvious now than during the fighting; perhaps because another year of anxious waiting for peace and a return to normal living conditions has passed without fulfilment . . ."

It was at Long Thanh Refugee Camp, about 30 miles north of Saigon that Dr. Lotta found the 3,305 families.

They are housed in barracks, where each family has a space of two to three yards allotted as living quarters. Each owns one common bed built with wooden planks, some surrounded by a few poles where torn blankets and bits of material are draped around, to create a little privacy.

Their pathetically few earthly belongings are stacked beneath the makeshift family bed.

"Flies by the thousands were everywhere," the letter says, "and in quiet desperation our guide explained that he was doing all he could to control this outbreak, but without success . . ."

During her visit to the camp, Dr. Lotta asked about the greatest needs. Without hesitation came the answer — lightweight adults' and children's clothing and soap.

"Commodities which our own USC has in plenty, but the problem will be to arrange for transport and for safe distribution."

Since her return to USC headquarters in Ottawa that is one of the things Hitschmanova has been working on — transport and more particularly, safe distribution.

Dr. Hitschmanova

The letter goes on to say long term needs are also urgent "and one simple, but important, immediate way to come to the rescue is to provide money."

Ten dollars will provide an uprooted family anxious to return to home territory for a new start in life, with a set of agricultural tools. If those tools get there by early August rice paddies can be prepared and food grown for the next harvest.

Immediately on her return Dr. Lotta recommended that the USC budget for Vietnam be increased fourfold to assist as much as possible.

She says, "of course we cannot rehabilitate them all . . . there are 40,000 families now desperately waiting for help . . . but every single one helped means one step forward towards a more normal existance . . ."

Here she suggests we may be asking — "with conditions still so uncertain and the possibility of more outbreaks of violence constantly in the air, is this the time to invest precious Canadian Friendship Dollars in Vietnam?

Then she answers "I believe the time is ripe, because our investment is in human beings who desperately need our help NOW.

"Assistance must go on whatever the political and military situation and at this decisive moment, much can be done to show brave, uncomplaining people they have friends in the world who care."

Then, very humbly comes this sentence. "What I have said are only words — empty words — to you."

Followed by — "you must wander through the streets of Saigon at night and see the people asleep in the back alleys; children begging for a crumb to eat, their tummies bloated with worms and hunger; mother asking for alms outside sidewalk cafes.

"They are an immensley brave, hard working people and they certainly deserve our help."

Not only "our" help . . . but "your" help.

What about scratching off that extra bottle of good cheer you planned to take on your vacation, or some of the other extras you really don't need?

Instead, send the money to Dr. Hitschmanova to help defray expense of those agricultural tools that hopefully are now on the way to help with the next Vietnam harvest. Or some of the other necessities that out there, mean all the difference between life and death.

No matter how small the donation, it will help. The address, if you are interested, is 56 Sparks Street, Ottawa, KIP, 5B1, Canada.

Air-Burial Soars As Business For Oregonian

PORTLAND, Ore. (AP) — Out beyond the fog-shrouded Oregon coast, Mike Todd banks his single-engine Cessna, cranks open a vent window and a gentleman from Indiana is laid to his final rest.

The coarse crematory ashes whip out of a gabardine sack into the 120 mile-an-hour windstream and pelt the fuselage like hailstones, then drift down through the brilliant marshmallow clouds to the Pacific.

Todd snaps a color photograph of the drop site and begins the 60-mile flight back to Portland.

"The relatives like to have a picture," he said. "It sort of ties up all the loose ends, makes everything complete. I try to do it off some well-known scenic point that they'll recognize if they ever want to come back and visit."

Todd scatters human remains at sea for $35. The price includes the color photo and a card detailing the time and place of the drop.

He'll take family members along at no extra cost, but doesn't like to because of the chance of an emotional scene in the tiny plane.

And he'll provide an in-flight religious service, also at no cost, because "I know some ministers who love to fly."

Todd scatters ashes 15 to 20 times a month, usually over the Pacific but occasionally, at the family's request, over such landmarks as Oregon's 11,235-foot Mount Hood.

"The law here considers a cremated body to be in its final state and the family can do whatever it wants with the ashes," said Peggy Elmgren, executive secretary of the Oregon Funeral Directors Association.

Todd receives ashes, parcel post, from mortuaries all over the country, sometimes two or three times a day, but says he never handles more than one shipment per flight. "I consider that I'm doing business exclusively with one party at a particular time. That's the way my customers want it and that's the way I do it."

Todd, 38, gave up an Army career four years ago and began earning a living air-taxiing bodies for mortuaries, which still constitutes the bulk of his business.

Pedal Bikes Need Fuel, Too

By HILDA BEASTALL

A thought that often comes to mind on seeing bicycling or hitchhiking youngsters on summer highways is whether they have enough food along to sustain them for an active day.

It used to be good bread with cheese, or peanut butter and honey when we were out for a day and it kept us going.

When hiking, the difficulty is in bulk and weight of food carried, so what is needed is the greatest sustaining power in the least space.

A crunchy, dried grain mixture made up in quantity at home by the youngsters themselves will be useful. Here is one recipe, delicious at home with fruit juice or milk, or on a bike eaten from the hand even though the hand is only reasonably clean.

CRUNCHY GRAIN HIKING MIX:

3 c. rolled rye (or rolled oats)
1 c. wheat germ,
1 c. raw unsalted peanuts chopped
1 c. unsweetened coconut
2 tsp. demarara sugar or liquid honey
2 tbsp. soft margarine
a very few grains of salt

Mix all together with a fork. Spread ½-inch deep in glass pie plates (or on cookie sheet). Bake in a slow oven at 200 to 250 degs. until beginning to get lightly golden. Stir with fork occasionally as the edges get brown first. Let cool thoroughly before storing in glass jars. These amounts make two 20-ounce jars.

Plenty of sustaining energy is packed into this recipe without any quantity of sugar to create thirst. Add a handful of dried sultanas or currants to a jarful. Use raw, unsalted nuts. Too much salt creates a thirst, though some is needed in hit weather.

When something more "breakable" can be toted, make up a meat loaf recipe using whole wheat bread crumbs and an egg to hold it together well.

YEAST BREAD (PASTRY) COVERING:

two-thirds c. warm water
1 tsp. sugar
1 pkg. dry yeast
1 tbsp. soft margarine
½ tsp. salt
1 egg beaten
1¼ to 1¾ c. mixed wholewheat and nubleached flours

Follow earlier tips on making the Beginners Bread; have bowl warm, avoid draft and don't be in a big hurry.

Measure water into large warm bowl; stir in 1 tsp. sugar; sprinkle yeast on surface. Let stand 10 minutes. Then stir well.

Add margarine, salt, egg and ½ c. flour and beat with wooden spoon until smooth. Stir in about 1 c. flour (mixture), beat until dough becomes sticky and leaves side of bowl.

Grease top of dough. Cover and set to rise in warm place (about 80 degs.) until bulk is double about ½ an hour.

Stir dough down with spoon, turn on lightly floured board and pat and roll into 12x15-inch rectangle. Well grease a 9x5x3-inch pan; line with dough. Place cold meat loaf in pan; cover with dough pulled up and over to the top. Seal all edges.

Bake in 350 to 375 deg. oven for about 30 minutes, until brown. Invert at once on cookie sheet, brush with a little beaten egg or soft margarine to improve crust. Return to oven for another 10 minutes.

Jealousy Roots Best Explained

DEAR ABBY: I am jealous of my husband's secretary. It's not her fault, and it's so ironic because I was once in the same situation she's in. I'll explain.

Before I married, a church youth director started enjoying my company. He was trying to help me with some of my problems. Before I knew it, he was getting serious. He was married and had children. I don't think I consciously led him on, but I must have contributed to it or he never would have gotten serious.

I thought things were getting out of hand, so I told him I couldn't see him any more. His wife was extremely jealous, and although words were never exchanged between us, I felt so guilty. I left the church. He kept calling me, but I never saw him again.

Now, four years later, my husband's secretary has problems, and he says he is trying to help her solve them in a Christian way. However, he's not very convincing to me, and now I'm the jealous wife. He pulled strings to get her promoted with him. He even explains her needs to me, without realizing that I have needs, too. I need to feel that he is all mine.

How can I get over this intense jealousy so I can feel like a wife again? — Jealous.

DEAR JEALOUS: You won't get over your intense jealousy until you are convinced you have nothing about which to be jealous. That kind of reassurance can come only from your husband. How do you figure it's not his secretary's fault that you are jealous of her? She has no business crying on your husband's shoulder. And he has no business letting her. Furthermore, why is he telling you about her "needs?"

You were wise to have told the church youth director to get lost before things got out of hand. And it took character to keep him at arm's length. His wife sensed something was wrong, just as you do. Tell your husband to knock off the counseling bit. And tell him why.

DEAR ABBY: Without commenting on the legal, moral, or social aspect of the situation, here are the facts:

My son and his girl friend, who are living together, have announced that they are going to have a baby. They are very happy about it. The girl's friends have "showered" her with gifts. As far as I know, the prospective parents have no plans to marry in the immediate future.

My question: How may I announce the birth of my first grandchild — an event I am looking forward to with great anticipation? Is there a way I can show my love and acceptance of this child — just as I love and accept my son, without seeming too inconsiderate of others who may have a strong opposition to such a situation? — No Judge.

DEAR NO: Don't make an official announcement. Your obvious love and acceptance of the child will speak for itself. The "others" who oppose such a situation must surely realize that you are not responsible for your son's actions.

DEAR ABBY: Our 22-year-old son, Erik, is marrying Heather, who is 21. Erik asked his father to be his best man, and naturally his father was flattered and delighted.

When Heather heard about it she said she had asked her 21-year-old girl friend to be her maid of honor, and it will look ridiculous for a 47-year-old man to stand up for the groom when a 21-year-old girl is standing up for the bride. Heather has asked Erik to reconsider.

Do you think it will look ridiculous? And how should this sticky problem be handled?—Erik's Mother.

DEAR MOTHER: I see nothing ridiculous about it. Heather should be told that the best man and maid of honor do not necessarily have to be the same age.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Real estate, property values, additional security — these are spotlighted. Be analytical. Select quality. Don't fool yourself. No one intends to give you something for nothing. Pisces person could whisper sweet nothings.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Money connected with relative commands attention. Assume responsibility but be sure others carry their fair share. You need not be a doormat. Short trip is featured. Past commitment is subject of spirited negotiation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Money dilemma is resolved if you agree to "let go" of the past. Broaden horizons. Potential is great. Know it; act like you are aware of it. Accent is on valuables, personal possessions, finances. Aries is in picture.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Lunar cycle is high; take initiative. You have chance now to gain through independence, new contacts. Strive to express original ideas. Brighten surroundings. Shake off lethargy. Trust your own hunch, judgment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): There could be general slowdown. Ride with tide. Deal with Cancer person. Find common areas of interest. One who seems to lack confidence merely needs encouragement. Give it and you will be handsomely repaid.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Accent on desires, ability to win friends and sway people. Socialize. Share knowledge and interests. Don't be satisfied with one path. Be versatile. Valuable contacts can be made if you are open, receptive.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Spotlight on career, advancement, gradual fulfillment of ambitions. Progress may be slow but it is steady. There is room for you at top but red tape will have to be untangled. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons could be involved.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are dynamic, somewhat self-centered, basically independent, stubborn, capable of cutting through nonessentials and getting to heart of matters. This month, July, should be your most significant of 1973. You draw to you many persons born under Leo and Aquarius. You are affectionate but cautious. You often trust the wrong persons. It is not easy, in affairs where emotions enter picture, for you to learn from experience.

Free for the Asking

By HARRIET HART

Today I want to draw your attention to a publication which is valuable for anybody who knows at least some French. But those with a fair command of the language will benefit even more from the 16-page "Vocabulaire elementaire du telephone".

First, the booklet briefly explains in French what good telephone manners are. Then follows eight pages with English telephone expressions and their correct French equivalents. Common wrong French translations are also indicated.

For instance, those with only little French tend to say 'bienvenue' for 'you are welcome!'. But the correct French is 'de rien' or 'je vous en prie' or 'il n'y a pas de quoi'.

When somebody wants to ask his French-speaking telephone partner to hold the line, he should not say 'gardez la ligne' or 'restez sur la ligne'. The correct expression is 'ne quittez pas'.

And if your phone rings because somebody has dialed a wrong number, don't say 'mechant numero', but tell him a polite 'vous vous trompez de numero'.

Any switchboard operator or anyone who sometimes has telephone contact with French-speaking Canadians, will find this pamphlet extremely helpful. It is even better if he goes to the trouble of learning most of this compact vocabulary by heart.

Heart Doctors Stick to Low-Cholesterol-Diet Guns

NEW YORK (NYT) — How can one criticize a life-saving effort?

Time was when the family doctor (yes, child, there used to be family doctors) would say: "George, you've got to cut down on the beer and hard stuff, the bread and potatoes desserts." It was up to George's wife to nag him about his diet, and he either followed it or didn't, and that was that.

We are more advanced today. Judging from the flood of literature now pouring out, the whole country is dieting. By the same token, the whole country is mad about something called gourmet food. Which creates a paradox that publishers and other experts are only too eager to resolve. "Be a gourmet low-fat diet chef!" cries the National Foundation for Ileitis and Colitis, which is teaching how to cook with medium chain triglycerides.

Now comes the big artillery. The American Heart Association, which declared war on cholesterol 12 years ago, has brought forth a cookbook designed to prove that we can all enjoy living longer.

If we understand it correctly, the reasoning is this: The medical evidence is not all in, and some authorities are skeptical, but the probabilities are that if we put everybody —fat and lean, sedentary and active—on a low cholesterol diet, many thousands of people will be spared heart attacks.

As Dr. Campbell Moses, medical director of the A.H.A., puts it in a foreword to the American Heart Association Cookbook: "When we speak of risk, we are really speaking in a group sense, since it is impossible to predict the individual's body response."

So the problem is to persuade the general public (pulse and blood pressure normal) that it isn't really much of a sacrifice. Not easy. Consider French cuisine, the summit of Western cookery; As is well known, all Gaul is divided into three parts, which cook respectively, in butter, olive oil and goose or pork fat. Collectively, these are anathema to the A.H.A. Even olive oil, which has no cholesterol, is sniffed at because it's low in what are described as the beneficial polyunsaturated fatty acids.

Moses writes: "This is not a diet book. It is a cookbook — a fun book for people who like to cook and to eat."

Well, yes and no. For this

was a committee project, assigned by a board of physicians to two nutritionists and a staff who gathered recipes from a variety of sources. Inevitably, the result is mixed. Some contributions are interesting — the bread section is delicious reading — and some are just awful.

Take the very first recipe in the book: Tuna-Dill Pate. It's an aspic of tuna, canned vegetable juice and gelatin—the archtype of those horrid ladies' magazine dishes of the Twenties that turned American men into meat-and-potatoes guys.

The second recipe is a time-wasting flower arrangement of raw vegetables. We are told to serve these with a dip, such as yogurt with curry and mayonnaise. The editors do us a service by banning fried chips and other prepared cocktail snacks, but they're big on pretzels and ersatz dips and aspics.

Their favorite dip is a Mock Sour Cream, made of cottage cheese, skim milk and lemon juice. The aspics included a canned peach-ginger ale-lemon Jell-O mold (where do they find these things?) and even an asparagus mold, embalming one of the finest of vegetables.

But they top these with a Spinach-Avocado-Orange Toss and a Party Walnut Broccoli that are not to be believed.

The editors lean heavily also on mayonnaise, although there is no recipe for it and the commercial product (one of the disasters of the North American diet) varies widely in fat composition. (Real mayonnaise, of course, is egg yolk and olive oil.)

There is sensible general advice on food preparation. But even if all the recipes had been assembled by a cook who knew and loved good food, a cookbook could not deliver on the premise that a low-cholesterol diet can be "just as delicious" or even "scarcely less delicious." (The latter phrase is applied to an omelet made with three egg whites and one yolk. It's just not true. In fact, to make a good omelet even better, one adds an extra yolk.)

We are told, for example, to cut down on red meat in favor of fish and poultry. But we can still find good-tasting beef and lamb, while the fish and poultry generally available to North Americans are sorry eating indeed. Take our butter, lard and olive oil away and eating is not going to be as much fun as it was.

For many people, this sacrifice is doubtless necessary. The cookbook's advice will be useful to them: Lay off those abominable pre-cooked "convenience" foods and mixes, trim your meats and broil them, cut out sauces and rich desserts in restaurants.

For the rest of us, there may be an alternative. If it is generally true that physically active people can absorb a fair amount of cholesterol without harm, then we might all mount bicycles. Also, bring back the old-fashioned, hand-turned ice cream freezer. The one who cranks the most gets to lick the paddle.

Pain Games Described

SEATTLE, Wash. (UPI) — Pain can become a way of life for some individuals who suffer chronically, and sometimes they are unwilling to have it cease, a psychiatrist reported at a symposium here recently.

Dr. Richard Sternbach of the University of California medical school at San Diego told of "pain games" in which many persons who suffer chronic pain achieve various "payoffs" through perpetuation of their pain, which they subconsciously cling to.

As examples, Sternbach cited what he called the "professional pain patient" who, like an athlete, receives compensation for his situation — in unemployment claims, pension, litigation suits and other means; the "addict," for whim continuing pain is both an official and a self-justification for drug escape; and the "confounder," who feeds his ego by perplexing the greatest medical institutions with his pain.

Sternbach told his colleagues attending the pain symposium that to counter these tendencies among patients, physicians should be aware of the potentially manipulative, or "one-upsmanship nature" of patient-doctor relationships.

Aside from the payoff motive, he said, the over-all motivation in chronic pain patients often is to perpetuate a lifestyle to which they have become accustomed. That may include attention and sympathy from others or lack of responsibilities, he added.

Dr. Wilbert Fordyce, professor of psychology at the University of Washington department of rehabilitation medicine, said that if pain is played as a game by some, it also is a "learned" behavior and to free chronic patients from learned pain when its actual causes have been removed, it often is necessary to help them "unlearn" it.

Fordyce has developed an unlearning program called operant conditioning. This recognizes the benefits that may accompany chronic pain and persons who reinforce these benefits — family members, hospital staff members and others — are withdrawn as much as possible. The patient then is put on a program which calls for increases in exercise, work or other activities and rewards are used to reinforce this positive behavior.

Fordyce also uses a "pain cocktail" for patients whose pain has been acknowledged and reinforced by regular medication. The cocktail is is medication mixed with flavored syrup, and the medicine in it is gradually diminished until the patient is receiving only the syrup.

Province to Help Handcraft Trade

CHARLOTTETOWN (CP) — The Prince Edward Island government has initiated a program designed to develop the province's handcraft industry.

The minister responsible for the industry department's campaign, Dr. John Maloney, has described the program as an effort to restructure the handcraft trades into a viable industry.

Under the program, the department will provide assistance to craftsmen in the form of forgiveable performance loans to a maximum of $3,000 a man.

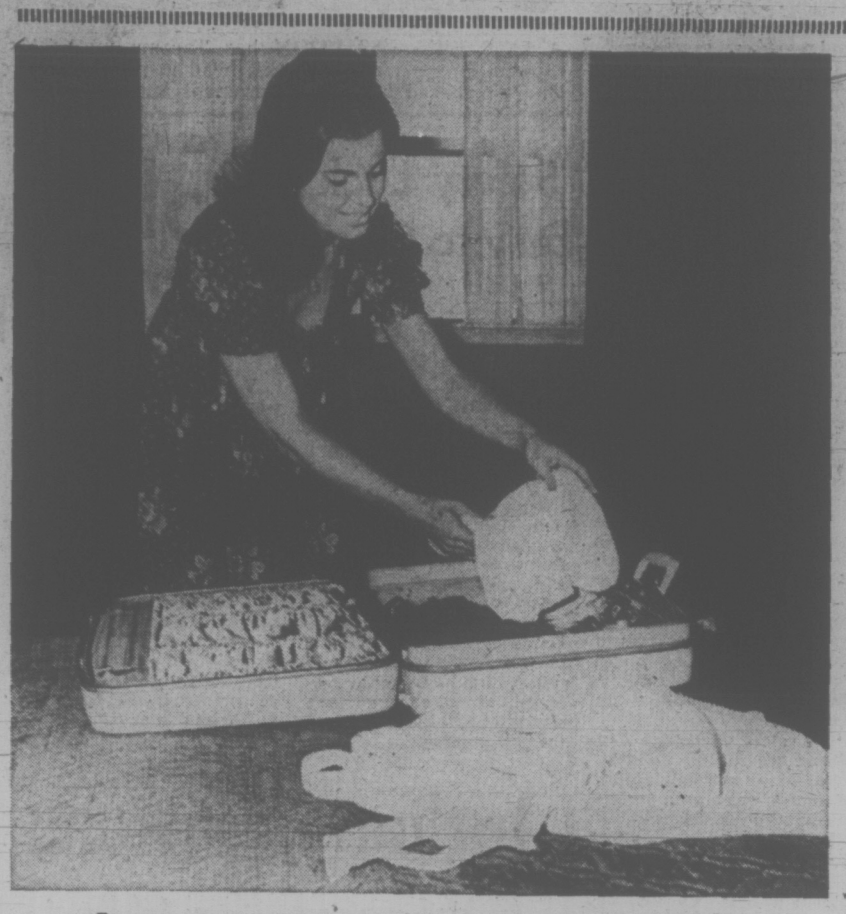
Under the scheme, craftsmen will receive loans for new, used and reconditioned equipment and machinery used in production.

The loans may also be used for renovations and modification to work premises. Recipients may also use up to 15 per cent of the total capital costs for purchasing raw materials and supplies.

To qualify a project must involve a minimum total cost of $1,000 of which the craftsman must provide 50 per cent. The craftsman must also demonstrate that his work is marketable under standards set by a committee of the island craftsmen's council.

A craftsman who attains specified standards will not be required to repay the loan.

Dr. Maloney notes that under previous plans only groups or organizations would receive grants or loans and says the new program provides for more flexibility in the potential industry.



Easy-care garments make sense for vacation suitcase

Packing 'Em In

Choosing clothes to take on vacation can be difficult but remembering a few simple guidelines can make the decisions much easier.

Pack only what you know you will be able to wear. Don't take a special dress "in case" there is a dressy occasion; fashions are much less rigid these days and you can go anywhere in a long slinky print gown for instance.

Stay with clothes you wear comfortably and confidently.

Choose your most uncrushable and easy-care washable garments. There are so many of these on the market today and ready-to-wear designers are featuring washable garments in response to consumer demand. Most of them can literally be rolled up and stuffed in the corner of a suitcase, yet will be ready to wear immediately you arrive at your destination. Should they have acquired a few wrinkles that won't hang out overnight, pep them up by turning on a hot shower and hanging garments in the bathroom to steam.

Most Greater Victorians still vacation in the south, where lightweight garments are the thing to wear. This is where synthetic fabrics really come into their own. Washable and uncrushable, they are easily rinsed out in a hotel washbasin and dried overnight. However, if you are not able to wash garments frequently — say, while camping — no-iron cotton avoids perspiration odor common to "overworn" synthetics.

If you have no washing instructions, just remember to use warm water in which you have dissolved a few tablespoonsful of detergent. Squeeze garment gently through the suds, rinse thoroughly and hang to dry, straightening hems, seams and cuffs. This gentle treatment is effective for most synthetics and perma press.

Chip Trade Guards Flavor

LONDON (Reuter) — The European Common Market was accused today of seeking to spoil the flavor of Britain's fish and chips.

The Fried Fish Caterers' Association sent a protest letter about it to the ministry of agriculture and fisheries in London.

The association complained that the fish and chip trade could be badly hit by a proposed Common Market ban on synthetic acetic acid used in British-type vinegar which is usually sprinkled on fish and chips. The association said this kind of vinegar has a better taste than the brewed malt or wine variety.

But now that Britain belongs to the European Economic Community, continental-type vinegar would have to be used if the regulation were implemented, the letter said. It went on:

" . . . It is merely an attempt by the wine producing countries in the Common Market to find an additional outlet for their over-produced stocks of wine vinegar and its use in this would change the present way of enjoying the flavor this traditional British dish."

Here are several things you can make with coffee cans. Use oil base paints and bond cement.

1. For kitchen casisters, paint and decorate cans. Screw a wooden doorknob to the center of each plastic lid.

2. For jumbo candle holders, stack cans, starting with the largest and graduating to the smallest. Glue together. Top with a small disposable pie tin and a vigil light.

3. A card holder is a can with both ends removed and yarn wrapped in and out of the can, covering the entire surface.

4. Camouflage cleanser with a large decorated can turned upside down.

5. For a kitchen or workshop catch-all, glue five cans together in a triangle. Punch a hole in the center of the middle can's bottom and insert over two corresponding nails on the wall.

6. Door stops are cans filled with plaster of paris.

7. For a sewing case, give can a pincushion top. Cut two circles of fabric the size of the lid. Sew ¾ around, turn inside out, stuff, and stitch close. Glue cushion to top of the lid.

DARNING SOCKS

There certainly is a correct way to darn, and you might say the technique falls into the weaving category. First you need a darning egg. If you don't want to buy one or you can't locate one at your sewing counter, make one. Here's how:

Take an egg at room temperature and gently pierce both ends with a needle. Chip away the shell on the blunt end to form a ½-inch hole. Blow out the egg, wash, and then fill with liquid plaster of paris. Allow to thoroughly harden.

Place the darning egg in the sock when working. To darn, trim the hole to rom an even circle or square. Make a series of vertical threads over the hole, starting ½ inch beyond the edge of the hole. The stitches that are on the fabric should be short and sturdy, the closer together, the tighter the weave. The horizontal stitches also start ½ inch beyond the hole. The needle is then worked like the shuttle of a loom going in and out of the threads over the hole as well as under and over the stitches on the fabric.

This method can also be used for mending holes in wool, linens and cotton. For these mending jobs, cut the hole into a square and proceed as above.

CURTAIN APRONS

Thrift-shop shopping is a good habit to fall into. I buy old cafe curtains for 10 cents to 25 cents. I wash and starch them and add a length of ribbon through the top hems. I gather the curtain to span the front of my waist and stitch the ends of the gathered curtain to the ribbon for an inexpensive apron.

Women Eyed For Buses

TORONTO (CP) — Women may be liberated into driving buses for the Toronto Transit Commission before the end of the year because of a shortage of men.

James Kearns, general manager of the commission, said it can't find enough qualified drivers. It's understaffed by 36 now and will need another 100 by the end of the year to cover planned expansion.

Canada Unions Flex Muscles

WINNIPEG (CP) — Delegates to the Council of Canadian Unions' fifth annual convention Sunday broadened their future horizons, changed their collective name, and refined their organization machinery.

With speeches kept to a minimum, the more than 70 delegates from Manitoba, British Columbia, Alberta, Ontario, Quebec and Yukon Territories, had ample time to chart a future course for their development of an independent national labor movement.

Adoption in principle of a resolution for the executive board to design a national organizing program followed by a plea Saturday by Secretary Treasurer R. Kent Rowley of Montreal for the more than 800,000 workers in various Canadian unions to unite around common cause.

Manitoba Labor Minister Russell Paulley applauded the efforts of the CCU in organizing labor.

He said Manitoba's ground rules for organizing labor are possibly the most favorable in Canada, but added that with the exception of teachers and civil servants, only about 35 per cent of the Manitoba labor force is organized.

Paulley is retired as a railwayman but the former Manitoba NDP leader still proudly carries a union card as a member of the International Brotherhood of Railway Carmen, an affiliate of the Canadian Labor Congress.

He said some might feel it is form of heresy for a member of a CLC affiliate to be friendly to the CCU, but there were larger problems to solve.

"I enjoin you to go into areas where the unorganized are working under conditions that are intolerable," Paulley told CCU members. Later he toll reporters the farm and retail areas particularly need organizing.

Paulley said he has noticed in news reports that the CCU isn't "particularly concerned" with raiding memberships of other uniops. He said his department would be helped if more workers were organized.

Faced with some 40 resolutions, some of them perennial items since the organization was formed in 1968, delegates agreed autonomy has been reached for a permanent labor body and changed their name to the Confederation of Canadian Unions.

Following criticism that unions wanting to affiliate with the CCU are not being accepted quickly enough, delegates urged the new executive to waste no time in developing the organizing program for Canadian workers.

Delegates warmed to a speech by former Manitoba government backbencher Cy Gonick encouraging public ownership of Canada's natural resource industries, and later approved a resolution asking that the Trans-Canada Pipeline be extended to supply all parts of the country.

Gonick, once a prominent member of the NDP's now-defunct Waffle group, said the Mackenzie Valley gas pipeline is the single most disastrous project Canada has ever undertaken.

He received a strong round of applause for condemning Canadian governments for being "more than willing" to subsidize American energy consumers with Canada's natural resources.

Despite considerable debate, delegates passed a resolution to ask the organization's 20,000 members for a referendum vote on whether CCU officers should be chose by convention delegates or the membership-at-large.

The resolutions has been on the order paper since the group was founded, but was annually tabled.

In other business, delegates asked that the independent Canadian union member be present on all labor relations boards, that provincial ombudsmen be established throughout Canada, and that public disclosure of reports under the federal corporations and labor unions returns act be made promptly.

As well, equal employment opportunities for all workers was endorsed, but a resolution asking all government bodies and university administrations immediately stop hiring teaching staff not at present Canadian citizens or landed immigrants was referred to the incoming executive for further study.

Instead of continuing with annual conventions, delegates voted for a national meeting every two years with officers serving two-year terms.

Re-elected were president John Meloron of Toronto, Secretary Treasurer R. Kent Rowley of Montreal and central area vice-president William Butcher, also of Montreal.

Jess Succamore of Vancouver was named first vice-president and George Carlson of Prince George, chosen western vice-president.

CAN'T WIN SITUATION has Tacoma motorist Joseph Brower scratching his head in puzzlement. In response to pleas of government authorities to conserve gas by slowing down, Brower eased back to 50 on Highway 16 but promptly was flagged down and ticketed for obstructing traffic.

Safety Lock Easy to Open

DETROIT (AP) — A highly touted seat belt interlock system on 1974 cars can be bypassed easily, say spokesmen for North American automakers.

The system is designed so motorists and their passengers must buckle seat and shoulder belts in order to start the car.

But a Ford official, quoted in the Detroit News, said his company's system can be beaten and said "You can defeat any of the others, too."

The head of the Centre for Auto Safety in Washington, Lowell Dodge, said the Chrysler and General Motors systems can be beaten by fastening one end of the driver's side belt to its counterpart on the passenger side.

Police Forces Don't Belong to Chief

VANCOUVER (CP) — Police relations with the community would be a lot better if most police chiefs didn't still treat their force as if it belonged to them, says Syd Brown of Toronto, retiring president of the Canadian Police Association.

"Traditionally, police chiefs have treated the force as if it belongs to them and not to the community. They treat it as a strong, silent service and then they wonder why they get no support from the community," he said in an interview.

While some chiefs are taking a more liberal attitude toward opening themselves up for public scrutiny, "generally speaking chiefs haven't changed their attitudes since the forces were first started. They think the police are nobody's business but the force's itself."

Brown, a barrel-chested, thick-armed, wise-cracking constable is a defender of the ordinary policeman but not of his boss. If he ran the force, he said, every policeman would be retired after 20 years of service to keep the men at the top close to the community.

Brown, at 48, has been wearing four hats as a policeman in the past few years, not including the Metro Toronto police cap he hasn't worn since 1962. Now retiring after five years as head of the CPA, he'll also be stepping out of the same chair in the Ontario Police Association.

But he'll continue to stay on as the head of the Metro Police Association and is also an enthusiastic member of the Ontario government's task force on policing which he hopes will deliver next January "an earth-shaking report with a whole new law enforcement concept."

His constable's badge still lies waiting for use if Brown ever wants to get back on the street instead of trying to improve the conditions there.

"We represent the guys on the street doing the work and not some kind of philosophizing coming out of some ivory tower," he said.

Indians Expect Ottawa Battle

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — The federal government is trying to obstruct attempts by natives to have their land claims settled in the courts, president James Wah-Shee of the Indian Brotherhood of the Northwest Territories said Sunday.

Wah-Shee, who along with chiefs and band councillors met with Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien Sunday, said Indians expect the government to "fight us to the bitter end."

He said it was unfortunate the government took such an approach illustrated by the recently unsuccessful attempt to have Mr. Justice William Morrow of the Northwest Territories Supreme Court prohibited from hearing arguments in the land-claims case.

The brotherhood, on behalf of 7,000 Indians, is claiming 400,000 square miles in the western part of the territories and is seeking to file a caveat — or legal statement of its interest — with the land files office.

Wah-Shee described the federal court decision not to prohibit Justice Morrow from hearing the arguments as a first-round victory in what promises to be lengthy litigation.

However, the Indian brotherhood felt it was making headway in dealings with Chretien and the Indian affairs department for travel, community development and other grants.

"To date we haven't received a definite yes, but we have received an indication from the minister that he will make funds available."

At a news conference Chretien said the federal government wants to honor its agreement with the treaty Indians.

BALTIMORE (AP) — Oakland Athletics have extended the contract of manager Dick Williams through the 1975 American League baseball season.

PENSION CLASH SPLITS RAIL MEN

OTTAWA (CP) — The pension of railway workers has become a thorny issue for the Canadian Railway Employees Pension Association.

The association split during a weekend meeting on what action it should take in the event its demands for 17 member unions are not met by the companies.

Some urged a strike in mid-August while at the other extreme were those who said the association has no right even to discuss strike action.

The association was created 18 years ago to fight for pension parity between railway employees and other federal workers.

Federal workers now receive two per cent of their salary for each year of service as an annual pension while, under a contract with Canadian National still awaiting ratification, railway workers saw their pension cut to 1.3 per cent from 1.5 per cent.

Jack Picketts, an association representative from Edmonton, said Sunday if the unions involved don't ratify the agreement, a strike should be called in August.

He demanded the association membership defy any back-to-work order until the pension agreement meets their demands.

But Keith Beckett of Biggar, Sask., told the two-day meeting: "This association is going to die along with the strike."

The deadline for ratifying the contract is July 10 and the workers would be in a legal position to strike 10 days later if they don't sign the contract.

Cocaine Cache

WASHINGTON (Reuter) — About 65 pounds of cocaine with an illicit street value of $10 million has been found hidden in a cargo of bananas from Panama, United States customs announced. It said a Miami truck driver was charged with smuggling and conspiracy. A spokesman said the cocaine was hidden among 27,000 pounds of bananas which arrived aboard the Columbian freighter Ciúdad de Bogota.

Weight Watchers Reduces Its Rates For "Golden Agers"
(62 and Over)

If you are 62 and over you can now join Weight Watchers classes at a reduced rate of $2 per week. Initial registration is only $4. That's a reduction of $1 on the weekly rate and $2 less for the one-time registration.

With the costs of everything going up, it becomes more and more difficult for many "golden agers" with fixed incomes to buy the things they want. Many are retired, yet still want to live active, vigorous lives.

The Weight Watchers organization has decided to do something about it. We feel it is important for people of all ages to have the opportunity to lose excess weight, and gain a trimmer, more attractive figure.

If you've gained unwanted pounds over the years, the Weight Watchers program can help you take them off and keep them off.

'LOLLIPOPS' KILL SIX CHILDREN

BARCELONA (AP) — Spanish doctors say poisonous explosive "lollipops" have killed at least six children here in 10 days.

Two small girls died Sunday of phosphorus poisoning. Two more children are in hospital in serious condition.

Doctors said the deaths were caused by match-like fireworks made of phosphorus and gun arabic which were sold at a fair. Attracted by their sweet taste, the children were poisoned when they licked the fireworks.

Ronning Missions Scuttled

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail says Canadian envoy Chester Ronning's two peacekeeping missions to North Vietnam in 1966 were undermined by skeptical United States officials and doomed to failure by Washington's persistent military escalation.

In a copyright story by Charles Taylor and S. J. Noumoff, the newspaper says the fact the missions were undermined is made clear from the Pentagon papers, including a previously unpublished chapter which describes attempts by Ronning, a retired Canadian diplomat, to arrange a negotiated settlement.

The Ronning missions were arranged by the Canadian government partly because the then external affairs minister, Paul Martin, was determined to show the Canadian people that Canada was not a U.S. satellite, the papers were reported as having said.

They tell how a North Vietnamese offer of informal talks — which Martin regarded as significant — was rejected by Washington at a time when then U.S. defence secretary Robert McNamara was recommending stepped-up bombing of the North.

The papers also relate how Washington began bombing oil storage depots in Hanoi and Haiphong immediately after Ronning's second visit, despite Martin's warning that this would make it appear that the U.S. had used the Canadian's trip as a pretext to justify further escalation.

Ronning, born in China, speaks Mandarin fluently and was the Canadian charge d'affaires in Nanking when the Communists came to power in 1949.

He was a strong advocate of Canadian recognition of China and had hoped to visit Peking after Hanoi. But he was informed by the Chinese that this would be "inopportune."

In another story, The Globe and Mail revealed Noumoff as its source for the information on the Pentagon papers.

Noumoff, a U.S. citizen who is associate director of the Centre for East Asian Studies and a member of the political science department at McGill University, Montreal, assisted in preparing material concerning Canada for the defence in the Pentagon papers trial of Daniel Ellsberg and Anthony Russo. This gave him access to unpublished material under a court-imposed protective order, prohibiting public disclosure.

He recently visited the federal court house in Los Angeles and found this same material available for public examination. The newspaper's series of articles on the papers was based on material gathered during his visit.

RACERS BEATEN, ROBBED

NEW YORK (UPI) — Five persons competing in a championship bicycle race were attacked and beaten in Central Park Sunday by youths who made off with four of the cyclists' expensive 10-speed racing bikes.

The attacks apparently were carried out by members of the same gang, some of whom used boards, knives and chains to beat and threaten their victims while their confederates disappeared with the stolen bicycles.

In two incidents, three 14-year-old Long Island boys were knocked from their bikes and forced into bushes, where they were held captive for 45 minutes while two youths rode off with their bikes, valued at $450.

Police said the gang members forced the youths to pull their shorts down around their ankles to prevent their running for help. The three were among about 200 contestants who participated in yesterday's Amateur Bicycle League of America contest.

In the other two attacks, a 30-year-old Queens housewife was beaten and robbed of her $600 racing bike and a 20-year-old youth, hit on the head with a flat board, managed to remount his bicycle and escape.

Unplanned Combinations Of Plants Often Please

An unplanned plant association is now resulting in as pleasant a color and texture picture as any contrived with years of experimenting. Two quite ordinary shrubs have been allowed this year to grow without customary spring pruning. This has resulted in earlier flowering and in both flowering at the same time.

The two plants are the silver leaved Lavender-cotton, Santolina incana (syn. S. chamaecyparissus), and Hebe speciosa var. Autumn Glory (used to be known as Veronica).

No shrubs could possibly be more easily propagated, for cutting root outdoors when taken in late July and produce flowers the followingg year.

The entire Hebe genus is native to the New Zealand islands; their hardiness depends not only on mild winters, but on good soil drainage and protection from winter winds from the northeast.

Since these two conditions may be controlled by the gardener, there's no reason why anyone liking this combination of Hebe and Santolina should not enjoy them.

Neither is a connoisseur's plant for it is too easily grown, needing restraint or it crowds daintier neighbors, and one has a strongly pungent perfume.

Santolina incana has about the smallest and most intricate leaves of any shrub. Silvery grey, almost threadlike yet in the mass a cloud of color, they are also presentable all winter. Only by April do they begin to look the worse for being rained on and chilled. Native to the Mediterranean coast, it really would prefer a dry winter.

In April the woody stems bearing the old foliage of the previous year are cut down, leaving only five or six inches of bare stems from which come new silvery growths in May.

Warmer days in June bring up the felted flower stems and it is then we usually begin to remove all these before the flowers open. Why? Because we say the crude mustard yellow offends us, it is out of character with the fineness of the silvery leaves; and they have a queer smell.

This year, in full bloom withthe small spikes of violet-purple blossoms just opening on the Hebes, we suddenly find the colors are complementary. So we are glad these shrubs did not get their annual spring pruning, and we're willing to forego intensive sniffing in the area where these rich colors are welcome.

Neat dark green leaves clothe the reddish flower stems of this Hebes. All season the stems continue growing, producing the two-inch spikes of flowers in the leaf axils until fall frosts call a halt.

You'll see a dozen or more species and varieties of Hebes in gardens and parks, many in bloom now. They will have white, pale lavender, or sometimes pink flowers. Their foliage is evergreen, susceptible to frost damage in hard winters if not provided with a living windbreak.

Keep an eye open this summer for chance associations of plants which please you. They will help you in the redesigning or the planning of your garden.

SOLUTION TUESDAY

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

While it may well be true, in a materialistic sense, that "diamonds are a girl's best friend," such is certainly not the case at the bridge table, where spades, hearts, and no-trump are more precious than diamonds.

When today's deal arose in the Life Masters Women's Pairs Championships of 1972, two of America's top women players, Emma Jean Hawes, of Fort Worth, and Dorothy Truscott, of New York City, were the only pair to arrive at a small slam in hearts. Many other pairs reached a small slam in diamonds which, of course, pays less than hearts. Mrs. Hawes was in the North seat, and Mrs. Truscott was South.

North-South vulnerable. West deals.

♠ 10
♡ A 7 4
◇ K Q 10 9 8 2

WEST
♠ A K J 6 3
♡ 9 5 2
◇ 6 4 3
♣ 10 3

EAST
♠ 7 5 4 2
♡ 8 6 3
♣ J 9 8 5 4

SOUTH
♠ Q 9 8
♡ K Q J 10
◇ A J 5
♣ A 7 2

The bidding:

West	North	East	South
Pass	1 ◇	Pass	1 ♡
Pass	2 ♡	Pass	3 ◇
Pass	4 ◇	Pass	4 NT
Pass	5 ◇	Pass	6 ♡
Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠.

Why a non-vulnerable West failed to overcall in spades is unknown. Had she bid, it might well have enabled East-West to take a successful sacrifice at six spades.

When Mrs. Hawes bid four diamonds over Mrs. Truscott's raise to three diamonds, the time for reflection by Mrs. Truscott had arrived.

She knew for certain that North had only three hearts, for with four hearts North would have bid either three hearts or four hearts (instead of four diamonds). Further, as the ladies play it, an immediate raise in responder's first-bid suit, when made on only three-card support, shows either a 5-4-3-1 distribution or a 6-3-3-1 hand.

Thus Mrs. Hawes figured to have a singleton in either spades or clubs. If the singleton were a club, then everything rated to be fine, since in this presumed set-up North would rate to have the spade king for her enthusiastic bidding. And if the singleton were a spade, then the club king figured to be in Mrs. Hawes' possession. With North's five-or-six-card diamond suit apparently consolidated by South's holdings in that suit, just one black-suit trick figured to be lost.

Thus it came to pass that, after checking for aces, Mrs. Truscott bid the small slam in hearts. After winning the king of spades at trick one, West shifted to a club, the board's queen winning. After drawing trumps, declarer claimed her contract.

FUN WITH FIGURES

By J. A. H. HUNTER

"It's Bob's birthday today," said Charlie. "I just made up something on his age."

Mary dropped her book. "That's awful. We did nothing about it. But what's the gimmick?"

"Nothing very special," Charlie told her. "If you multiply together its digits you get one more than half his age."

You figure it out.

OLD LAW BANS BASEBALL IN ALBANY

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — City councilmen have discovered that baseball is illegal in most sections of Albany.

An 1884 statute was unearthed that forbids "ball-playing and the playing of the game commonly known as and called shinny" in all but two small parks in the city.

"Shinny" was defined as the Irish version of stickball, which had been played extensively in this Irish-dominated city.

The statute probably will be repealed, councilmen said.

NASSAU — Prince Charles silenced a commentator at a polo match here Saturday when he apparently considered the man's remarks in poor taste.

The prince was playing for a Nassau team against a team from one of the neighboring islands in a game which was part of celebrations marking Bahamas independence next Tuesday.

An American polo player was giving a running commentary over the public address system to the crowd watching the match.

Spectators reported that the man poked fun at the prince, pretending he had forgotten his name and twice referring to him as Prince Philip.

He made comments such as "great shot" when the prince missed the ball, spectators said.

Prince Charles at one point dismounted, approached the commentator and spoke to him. The man stopped his broadcast and was reported to have left the stadium.

The polo match was not among the prince's best. His horse ran away with him at one point.

NICOSIA, Cyprus — Patriarch Nicolaos of Alexandria, president of a major Greek Orthodox synod meeting here, issued a strong ecclesiastical threat Sunday to the three bishops of the Cyprus Church who defrocked President Makarios as archbishop.

LONDON — Actress Diana Rigg, the shapely Mrs. Emma Peel in "The Avengers" television series, married Menachem Gueffen, an Israeli artist, last Friday, she revealed Sunday.

It is the first marriage for Miss Rigg, 34, who said less than two weeks ago in a magazine interview she saw no reason for getting married. She said in the same interview that she would like to have a baby but didn't quite know how to manage it as a single woman.

WALES, Alaska — A California man sailed a bathtub five miles into the Bering Sea today and released 1,000 letters of friendship from the American to the Russian people. The letters were released in an inner tube and wrapped in watertight plastic.

Leonard Moore, 48, of Oakland, said he got as close as he could "under the weather conditions" to the international dateline during the hour and an half voyage.

He said he battled rain and waves six feet high during the trip in the $15 used bathtub. Moore originally said he intended to go to Siberia.

RICHARDSON, Tex. — Barbara Bower got a $350 maternity bill from a doctor last week and she did not even know she had been pregnant.

According to the doctor's secretary, an 18-year-old woman registered there several weeks ago giving Mrs. Bower's name and address. She told the doctor her husband worked at Texas instruments in the Dallas suburb.

The woman eventually gave birth to a child and left the hospital with her baby.

Mrs. Bower, 29, said she would be happy to pay the bill if the doctor would "send us a baby girl."

Welfare Worth $11,500

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A congressional study published Saturday said a family of four in New York City would have to earn over $11,500 a year to be on an equal footing with a similar family which earned nothing but received all available welfare, health and housing benefits for the poor.

New York City is one of the most generous places in the world to its poor but the study said its multiple public assistance programs penalize working citizens who earn little. The system also discourages those on welfare from seeking jobs and the pay cheques which would deprive them of eligibility for benefits, the study said.

The study was prepared for Congress' house-senate economic committee by Blanche Bernstein with Anne Shkuda of the Centre for New York City affairs of the New School for Social Research, and Eveline Burns, a consultant.

Rep. Martha Griffiths (D-Mich.), who has been pressing for welfare reform on the grounds the present system discourages people from taking jobs, said New York's aid programs, in combination and sometimes individually, "can make it extraordinarily unprofitable to work."

The study showed how benefits may pile up to be worth the equivalent of taxable income of over $11,500.

Hirst Sands—Duncan

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.

He maketh me to lie down in green pastures: He leadeth me beside the still waters.

He restoreth my soul: He leadeth me in the paths of righteousness for His name's sake.

Yea, though I walk through the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil; for thou art with me: thy rod and thy staff they comfort me.

Thou preparest a table before me in the presence of mine enemies: thou anointest my head with oil; my cup runneth over.

Surely goodness and mercy shall follow me all the days of my life: and I will dwell in the house of the Lord for ever.

PSALM 23.

Bahamas Move To Nationhood

NASSAU, Bahamas (UPI) — The Bahama Islands become an independent state of the British Commonwealth at one minute after midnight tonight, and Prime Minister Lynden Pindling says the Bahamas are "the happiest, most congenial, most peaceful place in the western hemisphere."

The flag-raising ceremony symbolizing Bahamian independence will be attended by Prince Charles, U.S. Interior Secretary Rogers Morton, and dignitaries from 40 nations — not including the Soviet Union, China and Cuba.

Pindling, wearing a blue and white print shirt of African inspiration, called a dashiki, told foreign newsmen at a Sunday news conference:

"We make an attempt to minimize our problems, but we do have the atmosphere to find solutions and to resolve the problems and no one can ask for anything more."

Problems faced by the new nation of 200,000 inhabitants scattered over 700 islands will include rising unemployment, a pull-out of offshore investment firms, a tourism decline, and some lingering racial tensions.

The short, muscular prime minister said "comfortable" best described his mental attitude at the prospect of independence.

"Peace and calm prevail throughout the islands," he said.

"The ecumenical religious service of this morning symbolized to me the nations' unity in the thrust toward nationhood as the independence countdown begins."

He said the secessionist effort by the white minority on the Abaco Islands group was finished.

The Abacans, descendants of loyalists, who fled the American colonies after the declaration of U.S. independence, had petitioned the crown to remain a British colony.

Pool Need Query

The chairman of Saanich's indoor recreation committee has reservations about the need for an outdoor swimming pool in the municipality.

Ald. Fred Severson was commenting on an indoor recreation study released over the weekend.

The report is an updating by municipal planning and recreation staff of the 1966 study done by A. B. Sanderson and Co. Ltd.

The alderman pointed out, as the study does, that existing indoor pools in Greater Victoria — including Saanich's new Lambrick Park pool — are rarely filled to capacity.

But he disagreed with the report's recommendation that a pool in an "outdoor park-like setting" was needed.

"I'm again very suspect," said Severson.

The report says Saanich needs an outdoor pool, a second ice rink and another senior citizens' activity centre within the next five years.

Severson said a second ice rink is needed "and I think the Lambrick Park area is a natural site."

A third ice rink will be needed in the Royal Oak area in about 20 years, he added.

He said his committee would look closely at the proposal for another senior citizens' centre.

The report suggests such a centre be built in southeastern Saanich, probably the Cedar Hill-Shelbourne area which is close to bus routes and other services.

The Hampton Park senior citizens' centre "has failed to fully fulfil its initial objectives" as regards enrolment figures, the report says, because some senior citizens "find it easier to travel by bus to the Victoria centre downtown."

The report recommends that Saanich consider building another all-purpose community centre and a "field house structure" providing winter playing space for various minor sports between 1979 and 1986.

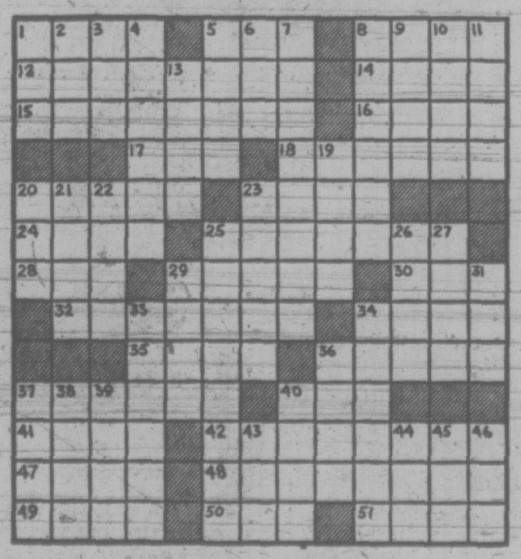
Answer to Previous Puzzle



IT WAS HOT Sunday night in Walla Walla, Wash., but this type of air conditioning wasn't what umpire Don James had in mind during a baseball game. And his embarrassment was prolonged when the scheduled seven-inning game went 11 innings.

Primitive Past Eyed as Aid

PARIS (Reuter) — Claude Levi-Strauss, the internationally-known French anthropologist-philosopher, is stepping up his studies of primitive tribes and myths to help solve some of the problems facing man in the highly-developed industrial countries of modern society.

He is working on a new book on the Kwakiutl, an Indian tribe which he visited in the northeastern part of Vancouver Island earlier this year.

He found that Kwakiutl have preserved intact their ancient rituals, initiation ceremonies, masks, songs and dances and living conditions.

Levi-Strauss, 64, is returning to the Kwakiutl tribe later this year and hopes to live with them for some time to complete his research work.

Known for his initiative, philosophical approach to anthropology, he believes that there is a logic to all human thought and that primitive peoples are logical rather than pre-logical.

He has carried out extensive studies of myths as logical systems created by man to solve problems which face him.

Levi-Strauss began his work 40 years ago when, as a sociology professor at the University of Sao Paulo, he led several ethnographic expeditions among Indian tribes in the Mato Grosso and wild Amazonia country of central Brazil.

Last month, the Australian government gave him as "a gesture of gratitude," a copy of a unique film on the initiation ceremonies of the fierce Baruya tribe which inhabits a remote area of Papua-New Guinea. Until a few years ago, the tribe had practised cannibalism and head-hunting.

The nine-hour film, made by the Australian Commonwealth film unit in co-operation with Dr. Maurice Godelier, a French anthropologist and one of Levi-Strauss' closest associates, covers most aspects of the sacred ceremonies never before seen live or on film by an outsider.

VALUES LINK

Australia so greatly values the close relations which have developed with the leading French anthropologists that the Canberra government decided to present the first copy of the film to organizations with which Levi-Strauss and Godelier are associated.

France recently made Levi-Strauss one of its "immortals" when he was elected as a menber of the French Academy—a fitting though belated recognition of his life work for which many other countries honored him long before.

He had already won the Viking Fund medal and award in 1965 and had become foreign honorary member of the Royal Anthropological Institute of Britain, the American Philosophic Society, American Academy of Arts and Sciences, the Academy of the Netherlands, Academy of Norway, British Academy and the U.S. National Academy of Science.

MD Strike Eyeopener

TEL AVIV (AP) — A strike by Israel's national health doctors exposed embarrassing statistics on the country's medical habits, and some Israelis are calling themselves "a nation of hypochondriacs."

Kupat Holim, the largest of the country's three health insurance services, ordinarily handles about 65,000 patients a day. But when 6,000 Kupat Holim doctors went on strike for higher pay last month, the number of visits to clinics shrank to only 7,000 a day.

The doctors operated as usual, however, and the only difference was that patients had to pay the physicians about $5 a visit and wait for a refund from Kupat Holim.

Airlines Feel Fuel Pinch

MONTREAL (CP) — Aviation fuel shortages have reached a stage in the United States where they may soon affect Air Canada's scheduling of charter flights to the U.S., an airline spokesman says.

John Sosnkowski, Air Canada's manager of petroleum purchasing, said the airline's charters to U.S. points could be the first affected, particularly flights to places where the airline does not have standing fuel supply contracts.

"So far the fuel shortage has not affected our scheduled services but we're concerned about that too," he said.

"The situation may get worse before it starts to get better and as an immediate step we have formed a committee to analyse the situation."

"It is not out of the question that we may have to start thinking in terms of adjusting our schedule to the availability of fuel."

Mr. Sosnkowski said it seems unlikely any widespread disruption of charters will result in the near future but the airline might have to take such measures as consolidating certain flights, making extra fuel stops or other arrangements.

Steps were taken some time ago to cut down on aircraft fuel consumption by lowering cruising speeds slightly.

The airline has guaranteed fuel supplies at international airports in U.S. cities where it flies scheduled runs but on charter flights to other airports it must rely on available domestic U.S. fuel.

In cities like Las Vegas, a popular charter destination, the airline must check in advance that fuel will be available before sending a charter flight there, an airline spokesman said.

"We have some charters lined up for locations where, on paper, we don't have any guaranteed supply of fuel," Mr. Sosnwokski said. "We can be refused completely."

Air Canada buys fuel from refineries in Quebec, Ontario, Alberta and British Columbia. Although Montreal supplies are not a problem, the airline "feels the limitations" in the rest of Canada.

to use some 360 million impe-

Air Canada, which expects to use some 360 million imperial gallons of fuel this year, also faces the problems of rising fuel costs.

Mr. Sosnkowski said the airline has already been hit by increases ranging from 10 to 70 per cent.

Since November, these increases have added more than $5 million to the airline's 1973 fuel bill, expected to reach $90 million by the end of the year. Air Canada's 1972 fuel bill was $57 million.

PM Would End West Grievances

CALGARY (CP)—Prime Minister Trudeau sees the western economic opportunities conference as a means to end Western Canada's isolation, but warns that a permanent western lobby could "destroy the concept of a federal government."

The July 24-26 conference here with the four western premiers, represents the tip of an iceberg of attempts to end historic western grievances, he said in an interview during the Queen's visit.

"It is high time that, for whatever reasons some of the western population feels alienated from Ottawa, we take drastic steps to come to grips with the problems that worry them.

"The people will not know that for months the whole apparatus of the federal government ... has been training minds to solve this crisis of our Confederation today. I meant it when I said that to my knowledge this is, except for wartime, the greatest concentrated effort of a federal government in Canadian history."

The prime minister agreed with western premiers that some concrete changes must be apparent if the conference is to represent a start to ending discontent.

"It will be measured ... by the spirit in which the conference is held and whether or not the results give cause for the western people to believe that at last they are an integral part of the government of our country."

He said that despite federal moves such as the purchase of hopper cars for grain movement, two-price wheat, record grain sales, and moving the royal mint to Winnipeg, the Liberal party lost control in the West.

"I could only conclude that these were seen as things that the East in a paternalistic way was doing for the West. I felt that in order to meet a large part of the psychological problem, the West had to be getting these things by and for themselves rather than receiving them from outside."

Trudeau defended his administration as the one that has consulted most with the provinces in history. But the apparent desire of westerners "to be part of the team" making decisions meant a meeting with the provincial premiers was necessary.

He also said he did not understand the importance of two symbols to the West—the RCMP and the monarchy.

AUCTION A GOLD RUSH

SEATTLE, Wash. (AP) — Momentoes of the Klondike were sold here this week.

Items that supported, clothed and entertained the miners who panned for gold in the 19th century were auctioned off at inflated 20th-century prices.

On the block were 2,238 lots of the Pullen Collection—5,000 items Harriet Pullen saved in Skagway, Alaska, the one-time gateway to the gold-rich Klondike and now a ferry and rail stop.

The four-day auction netted $298,456.

Harriet Pullen operated Skagway's finest hotel. It became the part-time haunt of Jefferson Randolph (Soapy) Smith, an outlaw grown into Alaskan legend.

Smith's headstone was sold for $625 to Randolph J. Smith, his grandsom. Smith also purchased his granddad's roulette wheel for $4,200.

A case full of 72 empty hip-flask whisky bottles was worth $225; an ornate beer ad depicting a red-robed woman, still in its original frame, was a $300 item.

Ancient slot machines—one shaped like a bee hive-rarely went for less than $300.

FROM STEAK TO HASH

A 23-year-old Lantzville woman was fined a total of $100 for shoplifting and possession of hashish by Judge D. K. McAdam in provincial court Saturday.

Bonita Kein was fined $50 for each charge after she was arrested Friday for stealing a porterhouse steak and a bag of mushrooms worth $6.39 from Canada Safeway. The hashish was found when she was searched.

Two-Car Crash Kills Island Man

A 24-year-old Campbell River man was killed and another seriously injured Saturday in a two-car crash on the Island Highway, about 12 miles north of Courtenay.

Robin Ricketts, a passenger in a car driven by Tom Quanstrom of Campbell River, died in the collision with a car driven by Jarnail Dhaliwal of New Westminster.

Another passenger in the Quanstrom car, Gary Maslowski, is listed in fair condition in Nanaimo hospital suffering from internal injuries.

The Day Canada Said Sorry

By JACK SCOTT, Times Staff
(Second of a Six-Part Series)

TOKYO — In what surely must be the only case of its kind, ever, the Canadian embassy had cause the other day to apologize to a nation.

The embassy's beaver-busy trade and commerce department bought space to say to the Japanese people that they were ever so sorry, that those Canadian fur coats — some in mink and sable priced as high as $7,500 — had been sold out.

The imports had run a series of beautiful, full-color ads (using models who'll do no good whatever for our brassiere industry) and to almost everybody's surprise the entire first shipment was gone overnight.

If our Canadian diplomats here had egg on their faces, it failed to hide the sheer delight that the event gave them.

After years of peddling our resources raw to this nation — the "logs and rocks" business as it's been known — we now have a foot in the Japanese door with a tremendous market for manufactured, processed good that can mean Canadian employment and yen in the pocket — and the way the Japanese yen is going, trat's the stuff to have, baby.

Last week the ground was broken for the construction of three demonstration houses — one skeletal, one framed, the third a completed home — to show the Japanese the advantages of Canadian-finished lumber and, hopefully, to nudge them toward adopting building standards of two-by-fours and the rest instead of the haphazard Japanese system of building.

Next week one of the largest of Tokyo's department stores will be showing Canadian men's and women's fashions, tailored for the smaller Japanese figure.

Come October at least 16 Canadian companies will be exhibiting repair equipment, clutch plates and other specialty parts at Tokyo's annual motor show.

In addition to the million-and-a-half dollars in Canadian fur coats that we're expecting to sell here this year, there's a brand new market for processed foods, high-quality upholstered furniture that will find a place in the increasingly westernized homes fast becoming the fashion for the affluent Japanese, sporting goods (two million Japanese have taken up golf and hunger for imported equipment), apparel that's made by the smaller, eastern Canadian specialty shops, ornamental jewelry, aero-space, computer and electronic products — a Montreal firm built and installed the flashing price board in Tokyo's booming stock exchange — and a wide variety of other products that require more than a faller's saw and a miner's shovel.

Questions Galore

In Tokyo these days the visiting Canadian finds himself being asked about the possibility of pre-fabricated homes, about Canadian-made water bombers for fire protection or the supplying of newsprint rather than pulp, steel rather that iron ore because (as they would have it) we can absorb the pollution of processing with less evident damage. There are repeated and informed queries, too, about joint development of the Alberta tar sands with refining on the site.

There is, infact, an impressive array of Canadian "firsts" that have received scant publicity back home.

A Don Mills, Ontario, computer firm signs its first order of $2.6 million for data entry equipment to be supplied to Japan's largest maker of computers. Twenty tons of western Canadian faba beans arrive to be tested by Japanese cattle-growers. Exports of Canadian pork increase so dramatically that Japan may replace the United States as our biggest customer.

A Montreal clothing manufacturer signs a five-year deal with an Osaka firm to provide styling and merchandising expertise. A Manitoba firm ships its first order of 200,000 pounds of skim milk powder. A Kitchener company begins manufacturing post office sorting equipment in a deal with Nippon Electric, using Japanese technology.

Canadian businessmen here shake their heads dolefully at the spectre of massed wholesalers, trading companies and other middle men who take their cut with a vengeance in a society where government and the apparatus of private profit-making are closely knit. Those sables that cost $7,500 here, retail in Montreal for $2,000.

There's some cynicism, too, about how far Japan will really go in letting foreign goods compete with domestic goods. One calls the "liberating" of import restrictions "more Kabuki Theatre than reality."

But most agree with the view of Maldwyn Thomas, the soft-spoken head of the embassy's commercial section, who takes the optimistic view.

"Sure, there are difficultes, some of them hidden," Thomas concedes, "but the fact is that Canadian companies are coming in here as they never have before and they're finding a growing market for their goods, especally in the qualty, luxury lines. Until recently the Japanese hadn't been aware of what we could do and we, in turn, hadn't made a serious attempt at selling them. The sheer size of this consumer market and its insatiable demand for foreign goods is working for us all-the way. Then, too, with the revaluation of the yen, we're much more competitive than we ever were."

Thomas, being a diplomat, doesn't allow himself a wince with the remark, but for the Canadian visitor who remembers when the dollar — Yankee or Canadian — was a thing of beauty and power in this land' it's a sad thing to see it so emasculated now.

Research Institute For UVic

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

A high-level research institute will be set up by the provincial government at the University of Victoria by the end of this year, Resources Minister Robert Williams said today.

Williams said the institute will consist of highly-qualified academic personnel who will carry out research projects assigned by the provincial government.

The institute, to be headed by American resource economist Mason Gaffney, will be funded 10 per cent by the provincial government.

Funding will be through the $5 million special fund set up this year by the government for research. Williams said interest from this fund should run between $350,000 and $450,000 per year.

The minister added that he would like to see the research fund expanded to $10 million and will make such a recommendation to the provincial treasury board before the next budgetary session of the legislature.

Gaffney, 49, is a PhD graduate from the University of California at Berkeley. He was head of the University of Wisconsin's School of Economics and worked for the Resources for the Future research project in Washington, D.C.

Williams said some of the institute personnel will likely be available to teach courses at UVic.

He described the role of the institute this way: "The idea was to establish an independent institute that would be involved in pure research in land and resource economic questions. It might spread beyond that later but that's how it will start."

Gaffney, described as a renowned specialist on resource economics, is coming to Victoria to advise the government on how the institute should be set up, the minister said.

Williams said Gaffney has already done some consulting work for the B.C. government, coming to the province for a week last September and for four days in December.

The resources minister called the American a top specialist in his field, and said he has been reading Gaffney's writings for 10 years or more and is "very impressed" with his work.

Actual details of the form the research institute will take will have to be worked out after Gaffney arrives in Victoria July 15, Williams said.

He did say, however, that it

TORONTO EXODUS JAMS BEACHES

TORONTO (CP) — Thousands of city-dwellers, seeking relief from 90-degree temperatures Sunday, forced five Metropolitan Toronto region conservation parks to close their gates early.

Albion Hills, Edmund Boyd, Heart Lake, Bruce's Mill and Clareville conservation areas were barred to visitors Sunday afternoon, but people kept coming — climbing gates and crawling under fences to get in.

Simon Bontje, regional superintendent for the Metro Toronto and region conservation authority, called the situation at Edmund Boyd area "just crazy."

$ Illness 'U.S. Fault'

Times News Services

LONDON—Failure of government central banks to take action against the dollar slide threw European currency exchanges into turmoil today. With no sign of government intervention in the markets the U.S. dollar bounced up and down in value against other currencies.

It dropped to new lows in Tokyo and Hong Kong, but the European situation was confused in the extreme. Trading was reported very light, and what there was was erratic.

Gold, which usually rides the other end of the dollar seesaw, slipped back in price on London's big bullion market as the dollar climbed in Europe. Its price was fixed at $126 an ounce at the morning session. Down $1 an ounce from Friday's fixed price.

The market nervousness followed weekend reports from Basel, Switzerland, that world bankers may move to defend the dollar and hints the United States may intervene in the world currency markets.

"Most dealers are waiting for the opening of American banks to give them a lead," said a dealer for Chase Manhattan Bank in London.

The dollar opened stronger in most European money markets. But indecision and confusion pushed it lower by mid-day nearly everywhere.

Trading which a French dealer described as "erratic", pushed the dollar down in Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, Stockholm and London.

NEWS BRIEFS

N-BLAST ISLAND AREA CLOSED

PARIS (UPI) — The French government Sunday ordered a suspension of shipping within 66 miles of a tiny South Pacific atoll, a move that in the past has indicated France is ready to carry out atmospheric nuclear tests.

In reaction, New Zealand denounced the French decision today and said it would go ahead with plans to send a navy ship to the test area in protest, observing only a 12-mile international limit.

13 Iraqis Executed

BEIRUT (Reuter) — Thirteen more Iraqis were executed Sunday night for their part in Iraqi security chief Col. Kazem Kazzar's unsuccessful coup, Baghdad radio said today.

Peace Corps Freed

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Uganda released 112 United States Peace Corps volunteers today, two days after they had been taken into custody on a flight from London to their posts in Africa.

Rumor Takes Over

ROME (UPI) — A new centre-left coalition led by Premier Mariano Rumor took office Sunday as the 35th government of Italy since 1943, its prospects for long-term survival haunted by inflation, rising crime and a faltering economy.

Fish Union Urges 'No' To Offer

Union fishermen in British Columbia are being urged to reject the latest salmon prices offer by the Fisheries Association of B.C.

But the association said the latest prices are "very definitely our final offer. We will go no higher than this."

Association manager Ken Campbell added that there is "a very real possibility" that the whole salmon season will be lost if fishermen members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) turn down the latest prices.

Negotiators representing UFAWU shoreworkers headed back to bargaining with the Fisheries Association of B.C., representing the companies, this afternoon and a meeting was being arranged with UFAWU tendermen.

All three groups, with a combined membership of 7,000, struck the fishing industry at noon Friday.

The Pacific Trollers Association, with 750 members, voted on the weekend to continue fishing and the trollers are expected to head for the fishing grounds Wednesday.

The Fishing Association of B.C., in a bargaining meeting lasting to shortly before midnight Sunday, offered 50 cents a pound for sockeye this year and 52 cents next year; 40 cents a pound this year and 43 cents next year for coho; 20 cents this year and 21 cents next year for pinks; and 23 cents this year and 24 cents next year for chums caught in most fishing areas.

In addition, the association offered ¼ cent a pound into the salmon welfare fund and workmen's compensation payment of 5-12s of 2.8 per cent of gross earnings.

The union wants these prices: 52 cents a pound this year and 57 cents next year for sockeye; 47 cents and 51 cents for coho; 24 cents and 28 cents for pinks, and 32 cents and 37 cents for chums.

CONVOY CHERRIES SOLD OUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A resounding commercial success in Vancouver Sunday for the United Fruit Growers cherry convoy marked the latest round in the British Columbia fruit industry's internal struggles.

More than seven tons of fresh cherries were sold in less than one hour in Gastown by the growers, who brought them down Saturday from orchards in the South Okanagan and Similkameen areas in a convoy of 20 trucks.

Hans Rhenisch, president of the UFG, a splinter group of the B.C. Fruit Growers Association, said the growers sold their entire load, about 11 tons in total, at prices well under normal retail prices.

HYDRO BONDS ON SALE TUESDAY

The provincial government today announced the issue of $25 million worth of B.C. Hydro parity bonds, which will go on sale to the public Tuesday.

Deputy finance minister Gerry Bryson said the bonds will carry an interest rate of seven per cent and will mature Aug. 3, 1978.

DOWNPOUR KILLS 30

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (UPI) — Authorities said today a predawn thunderstorm Sunday killed at least 30 persons in villages around this tourist city.

Another three persons were listed as missing.

A state government spokesman said 25 persons were injured, several of them critically, when buildings collapsed on them.

The flood also left an estimated 1,500 persons homeless.

Authorities sent emergency relief to the villages, where a mass burial was scheduled for the flood victims.

"It was unbelievable," a policeman said. "It was so quick that people didn't even have time to get out of bed before the water was on top of them."

TANAKA'S PARTY WINS IN TOKYO

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's ruling Liberal Democratic Party surged back to power today as the single largest force in the prestigious Tokyo metropolitan assembly.

Tanaka's party captured 51 of the 125 seats available to retain the same position it occupied in the previous assembly.

But voters also gave a boost to the rapidly growing Japan Communist Party whose campaign hit hard at such urban problems as the worsening urban environment, a housing shortage, inflation, traffic congestion and garbage disposal.

The Communists demonstrated their strength by increasing their number of seats to 24 from the 18 held in the previous assembly.

Crisis Poses Rationing Threat

WASHINGTON (CP) — Rationing of some types of food in the United States "might be necessary in one form or another" if the U.S. is to bolster its dollar and pay for growing imports of energy, a former agriculture department officials says.

Lester R. Brown, head of the department's international agricultural development branch in 1966-69 and currently on the staff of a private foundation here, said in an interview in U.S. News and World Report that President Nixon's curbs on soybean exports and other farm products are a "serious mistake."

Meanwhile, the U.S. agricultural department has computed that the huge drain on U.S. farm produce, mainly wheat, corn and soybeans, is adding an extra $2 billion to consumer food bills.

Even with the freeze announced by President Nixon last month, retail food prices are expected to climb at least 12 per cent this year. Department analysts says at least 1.5 to two per cent of that increase can be linked directly to farm exports.

In all, food spending may rise to $135 billion this year from about $125 billion in main reason for the $10-billion 1972. Higher prices are the boost, but there are more mouths to feed too. And they are eating more.

That means, according to the analysts, that at least $1.75 billion of the expected traced to higher prices caused increase in spending can be by the biggest flood of farm exports on record.

Elsewhere in Washington, Congressional investigators today blamed the massive sale of U.S. wheat to the Soviet Union last year for the current high price of food in the U.S., but excused the administration for making the deal.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of congress, said that the agriculture department did a poor job of arranging the sale, that large companies made excessive profits from it and that the government paid $300 million in unnecessary subsidies.

While criticizing the way the deal was handled, the GAO said it benefited the U.S. balance of payments, increased farm income, reduced surplus wheat stocks and put idle acreage back into production.

Brown said the temporary curbs "will clearly aggravate this country's balance-of-payments deficit, further weakening the dollar."

"We must recognize that agriculture is one of the few areas where we have a strong competitive advantage.

"A limit on U.S. farm exports would further weaken the dollar. It would certainly limit our ability to import the vast quantities of petroleum that we must have from abroad to keep U.S. business and industry going.

Anyone who seriously proposes limiting farm exports must also be prepared to pose a very stringent program for rationing gasoline."

Bureau Closing Decried

It would be "just ridiculous" to let the Victoria Visitors and Convention Bureau close in September as scheduled, says Empress Hotel manager W. A. Gray.

He said the four core municipalities should band together to save the bureau by agreeing to a new financing formula.

The bureau on the Causeway is scheduled to close in September in a controversy over lack of financial support.

Gray said he is encouraged that the Greater Victoria Chamber of Commerce is looking for a solution to the stalemate over financing the bureau, although he hoped the chamber would not try to run the bureau without municipal assistance.

Meanwhile the Central Business District advisory committee to city council was meeting at noon today to discuss the future of the visitors bureau.

Gray, who succeeded Louis Finamore as Empress manager in March, had been manager of the Saskatchewan Hotel in Regina for three years before coming here.

He said he approved of the system in Regina where the tourist office was handled by the Chamber of Commerce but financed jointly with provincial and municipal assistance.

In the Victoria area, large grants should come from Saanich, Oak Bay and Esquimalt as well as Victoria because all areas benefit from the tourist industry, he said.

Victoria officials have complained that they had been shouldering the lion's share of the costs of the bureau while other municipalities and private companies have not been paying a fair share.

Gray said The Empress is pleased to pay part of the costs of the bureau, although it does not benefit directly from the bureau's activities.

He said the hotel gets its customers through international advertising and its sales staff.

VANISHING BREED in the wake of changing commercial development is shoe repair man Herbert Davies, waiting on customer (above) in his shop on Johnson Street. Davies' rent will more than double next month and he fears it may force him out of business after 45 years.

45 Years Mending Soles —Then the Rent Doubles

By LINDA HUGHES
Times Staff

The brightly colored world of boutiques and craft shops, evolving in Victoria with the restoration of old buildings, has a dull grey side unnoticed in the rush of commercial development.

It's the world of people like Herbert Davies, a man who has spent 45 years mending soles and stitching heels in the business of shoe repair.

The rent on Davies' one-man shop, Arcadia Shoe Repairs on Johnson Street, will more than double next month and Davies simply cannot afford it. He fears he'll be forced to go on welfare.

His new landlord, Mike Williams, bought the two buildings which form the Duck Block on the corner of Johnson and Broad about two weeks ago. All the businesses and apartments in the block not on a lease will have rental increases ranging from 50 to 200 per cent.

Williams, who explains his main interest in old buildings is to restore them, says the buildings' rents are "ridiculously low" now and the increases will bring them up to the level of other rents in the area.

Davies, who had been paying $100 a month rent for his small repair shop, says he'll pay the new $220 rent for the month of August but after that will start looking for a new shop or a new job.

He doesn't think he will find either.

"It's $1,440 a year extra in rent and I'd have to increase my business 25 per cent just to cover the increase," Davies says.

"I'm too old to work six days a week after 45 years of standing on my feet eight hours a day every working day. I try to look for another job, but it's pretty tough when I have no experience in any other line. I tried four years ago and found I was too old."

If Davies gives up the shop, he won't receive much return on the $10,000 he's invested over the years in equipment.

"I wouldn't get more than $2,000 or $2,500 for it now. No young people are taking up the business," he says.

According to the Better Business Bureau, there is no legislation governing rents on commercial properties.

Williams bought the block for $280,000 from Oak Bay tailor Joe Grosso, who purchased it 18 months ago for $205,000. The block, therefore, has increased in value nearly 37 per cent.

The new landlord says the trend in developing old buildings is "going to go right through Old Town" and a lot of small businesses in the area aren't operating efficiently. Therefore, he says, they won't be able to survive.

Davies "is probably an old-time shoe repair man who hasn't moved with the times," Williams says. "You'll probably find other shops in the area are more progressive. That does not mean they're better, but means they're more attractive to customers."

Grosso, the previous owner, says the resnt he was charging were high enough to satisfy him but admits the people in the block "were getting away with murder" with such low rents.

The shoe repair man was perhaps the only exception, Grosso said, because he felt his tiny shop would not be suitable for any other kind of business.

The buildings, he said, are far behind and "new blood and new ideas" were bound to come in eventually.

"It's a changing world and many of us get caught," Grosso said.

So Davies keeps working in his shop, counting the days until he has to leave.

Williams says he's offered to help the repair man find a new shop, but rents in town will probably be too steep. Out of town, Davies might lose his regular customers.

"I like my work," Davies says, looking over the stacks of old boots, shoes and torn sandals waiting to be repaired. "I'd like to make a living at it. I just can't see getting a job as a janitor — or else I'll have to go on welfare."

More Report Cards

A new report card system featuring "frequent reporting" and evaluation of each child according to his own capabilities has been proposed by Hillcrest Elementary School.

The proposal, which will apply to Grades 4 to 7 at the school, will be discussed by Greater Victoria school board tonight.

Report cards would be sent home eight times a year and parents would be allowed to keep the cards with the teacher retaining a carbon copy.

Two sections of evaluation are included on the card. One is a check list of items indicating the child's achievement in relationship to what the teacher believes to be the child's capabilities. The other would show better grade marks indicating the child's achievement in relation to others in the class.

Space would be available for teachers to add written comments. And parent-teacher interviews could still be set up.

Hillcrest principal Don Henderson told the board in a letter that teachers at the school participated in drafting the reporting plan. "Staff opinion supports this request," the letter said.

Parents at the school also support the proposal, Henderson said, referring to results of a survey of 180 families.

Deal Claimed With Police

A crown witness in a heroin conspiracy trial testified today she made "A deal" with police before she began to sell heroin for one of the alleged conspirators.

Linda Marie Anderson, 21, of Edmonton, admitted to selling heroin supplied by Michael Kincses, 27, from a unit at the Fort Victoria Motel, 341 Island Highway.

Kincses and Wendy Dance, 25, Daniel Hadden, 57, and Robert Langer, 30, are standing trial before Victoria county court Judge M. L. Drake on charges of conspiracy to traffic in heroin and possession of heroin for trafficking.

Anderson said she was living at the Chandler Hotel with a man named Jim Condon in July and August of last year.

She told Condon she was thinking of selling heroin.

She was visiting Condon at Victoria police station in early September when she was approached by police officers who wanted "information."

"And you were given assurances?" asked Robert Price, defending Kincses and Dance.

"Not really," she replied.

Price asked how the police would have known she was thinking of trafficking.

The police indicated they had been told by Condon, she testified.

Price suggested the police assured her she would not be charged if she co-operated.

"You decided upon the suggestion of the police to become involved in this, is that not right?" asked Price.

"Yes," she replied, but added she had made the decision before then.

The woman told the court she wasn't guaranteed "amnesty" by the police.

Reading her testimony concerning the alleged deal from the preliminary hearing transcript, Price said "that was the price of your testimony?"

"Yes," Price quoted.

"And to date you have not been charged?" asked Price.

"No."

The trial is continuing.

WITNESSES FORCE CHICAGO DETOUR

Chicago, the American rock group, ended up sleeping at The Empress this weekend because there was no room at any Vancouver inns.

The seven-man group gave a concert in Vancouver but discovered that all the hotel space was occupied by thousands of Jehovah's Witnesses.

About 60,000 Witnesses were attending the mammoth Divine Victoria International Assembly at the Empire Stadium and Pacific Coliseum, which ended Sunday.

So Chicago flew over in their private plane to stay at The Empress Friday and Saturday night. The group is performing tonight at the Seattle Coliseum.

Paul Speaks For Indians

Chief Philip Paul will represent Indians at both provincial and national Man and Resources conferences being held this fall.

Paul was selected by the Union of B.C. Indian chiefs to attend the provincial meeting in Naramata Sept. 20-23 and the national meeting Nov. 18-22 in Toronto.

Other Victoria area residents who will be delegates at both conferences are Jim Campbell, chairman of the Capital Regional District board, Derrick Mallard of CASE (Citizens Association to Save the Environment), Howard English of the B.C. Wildlife Federation and Gloria Williams of Sooke.

Attending only the provincial meeting from this area are Laurie Cottrell, Art Gahan, Hal Knight, Molly Phillips, Mac Tipton, Chris Anderson, Kay Dixon, Val Gislason, Steve Quinn, Menno Tromp, George Atamanenko, Mrs. George Durand, Dr. Kemble Greenwood, Les Mazer, Larry Tickner and Rients van Goudoever.

Task force delegates from Victoria who have been preparing reports on resource issues and will be attending the provincial conference are Edith Bettison, Alan Austin, Frank Leversedge, Dr. Kemble Greenwood, Colin Campbell, Don Benn and Ted Frechette.

Bettison also will attend the national conference

The nationwide Man and Resources program is sponsored by the Canadian Council of Resource and Environment Ministers.

Yellow Car Linked To Holdup

A yellow car found in Saanich Saturday is believed to have been used in a $200 robbery Friday at the Elk Lake Grocery Store, 5450 Pat Bay Highway, police report.

The car was stolen July 6 from the corner of Fisgard and Government, but police would not specify where it was recovered.

Exams Studied For Mechanics

A move to require all car mechanics to hold tradesmen's tickets will go before a public hearing of the Provincial Apprenticeship Committee in Vancouver Aug. 6.

The official notice today of the public hearing said it is "for the purpose of considering the compulsory certification of tradesmen in the trade of automotive mechanical repair throughout the entire province."

The trade is defined as meaning "the repair, adjustment and replacement of mechanical and electrical parts of automobiles, trucks and buses."

A labor department spokesman said the move, is approved, would "technically" require all car mechanics to hold a tradesmen's ticket under the Apprenticeship and Tradesmen's Qualification Act.

However, he said allowances could be made "for special circumstances." He added that the car mechanics' trade for years has had a voluntary certification for tradesmen.

Written submissions may be made to John Melville, chairman of the Provincial Apprenticeship Committee, at the B.C. labor department office in Vancouver where the public hearing will be held.

THE HAT STILL FITS although its been 79 years since Victoria's John Locke Jamieson joined the North West Mounted Police. The oldest living former member of the force, 96-year-old Jamieson modelled the hat for RCMP Const. Ernie Kott in preparation for his visit last week with the Queen during the Calgary Stampede.

Student Ideas Get Backing

An invitation to school students to express their opinions on how B.C.'s education system could be improved has been received enthusiastically by local school board chairmen.

"There's definitely merit in getting the opinions of high school students — after all, they are the consumers of education and, really, they must have a say in what they're getting," Saanich school board chairman Rubymay Parrott said today.

She was responding to an anouncement by Education Commissioner John Bremer that students in B.C.'s schools would be invited to form study groups "to conduct inquiries into any aspect of the educational process that they might consider to be of concern and to submit recommendations for change and improvement."

Parrott said it would be most important to talk to high school students but younger students could express their opinions as well, provided the information was "well sifted."

"It's good that he (Bremer) is going to talk to people from all walks of life," Parrott said, adding that retired people could make an interesting contribution to the commissioner's three-year study of education.

Victoria's school board chairman Peter Bunn said the idea of gathering student opinion was "excellent" provided the study groups don't become simply "beef groups."

"I would hope some appreciation of the job done by teachers would come out of the groups as well," he said.

The groups, he said, probably would eventually be dominated by more articulate, more militant students.

"The centre-of-the-line, sensible thinking kid, probably won't get as much input in," he said.

Parrott said she didn't feel more militant students would dominate the study and added that schools today would not have any trouble finding students to express their opinions openly.

Sooke school board chairman Fred Willway could not be reached for comment.

The Day Canada Said Sorry

By JACK SCOTT, Times Staff
(Second of a Six-Part Series)

TOKYO — In what surely must be the only case of its kind, ever, the Canadian embassy had cause the other day to apologize to a nation.

The embassy's beaver-busy trade and commerce department bought space to say to the Japanese people that they were ever so sorry, that those Canadian fur coats — some in mink and sable priced as high as $7,500 — had been sold out.

The imports had run a series of beautiful, full-color ads (using models who'll do no good whatever for our brassiere industry) and to almost everybody's surprise the entire first shipment was gone overnight.

If our Canadian diplomats here had egg on their faces, it failed to hide the sheer delight that the event gave them.

After years of peddling our resources raw to this nation — the "logs and rocks" business as it's been known — we now have a foot in the Japanese door with a tremendous market for manufactured, processed good that can mean Canadian employment and yen in the pocket — and the way the Japanese yen is going, trat's the stuff to have, baby.

Last week the ground was broken for the construction of three demonstration houses — one skeletal, one framed, the third a completed home — to show the Japanese the advantages of Canadian-finished lumber and, hopefully, to nudge them toward adopting building standards of two-by-fours and the rest instead of the haphazard Japanese system of building.

Next week one of the largest of Tokyo's department stores will be showing Canadian men's and women's fashions, tailored for the smaller Japanese figure.

Come October at least 16 Canadian companies will be exhibiting repair equipment, clutch plates and other specialty parts at Tokyo's annual motor show.

In addition to the million-and-a-half dollars in Canadian fur coats that we're expecting to sell here this year, there's a brand new market for processed foods, high-quality upholstered furniture that will find a place in the increasingly westernized homes fast becoming the fashion for the affluent Japanese, sporting goods (two million Japanese have taken up golf and hunger for imported equipment), apparel that's made by the smaller, eastern Canadian specialty shops, ornamental jewelry, aero-space, computer and electronic products — a Montreal firm built and installed the flashing price board in Tokyo's booming stock exchange — and a wide variety of other products that require more than a faller's saw and a miner's shovel.

Questions Galore

In Tokyo these days the visiting Canadian finds himself being asked about the possibility of pre-fabricated homes, about Canadian-made water bombers for fire protection or the supplying of newsprint rather than pulp, steel rather that iron ore because (as they would have it) we can absorb the pollution of processing with less evident damage. There are repeated and informed queries, too, about joint development of the Alberta tar sands with refining on the site.

There is, in fact, an impressive array of Canadian "firsts" that have received scant publicity back home.

A Don Mills, Ontario, computer firm signs its first order of $2.6 million for data entry equipment to be supplied to Japan's largest maker of computers. Twenty tons of western Canadian faba beans arrive to be tested by Japanese cattle-growers. Exports of Canadian pork increase so dramatically that Japan may replace the United States as our biggest customer.

A Montreal clothing manufacturer signs a five-year deal with an Osaka firm to provide styling and merchandising expertise. A Manitoba firm ships its first order of 200,000 pounds of skim milk powder. A Kitchener company begins manufacturing post office sorting equipment in a deal with Nippon Electric, using Japanese technology.

Canadian businessmen here shake their heads dolefully at the spectre of massed wholesalers, trading companies and other middle men who take their cut with a vengeance in a society where government and the apparatus of private profit-making are closely knit. Those sables that cost $7,500 here, retail in Montreal for $2,000.

There's some cynicism, too, about how far Japan will really go in letting foreign goods compete with domestic goods. One calls the "liberating" of import restrictions "more Kabuki Theatre than reality."

But most agree with the view of Maldwyn Thomas, the soft-spoken head of the embassy's commercial section, who takes the optimistic view.

"Sure, there are difficulties, some of them hidden," Thomas concedes, "but the fact is that Canadian companies are coming in here as they never have before and they're finding a growing market for their goods, especally in the quality, luxury lines. Until recently the Japanese hadn't been aware of what we could do and we, in turn, hadn't made a serious attempt at selling them. The sheer size of this consumer market and its insatiable demand for foreign goods is working for us all the way. Then, too, with the revaluation of the yen, we're much more competitive than we ever were."

Thomas, being a diplomat, doesn't allow himself a wince with the remark, but for the Canadian visitor who remembers when the dollar — Yankee or Canadian — was a thing of beauty and power in this land it's a sad thing to see it so emasculated now.

Research Institute For UVic

By BRIAN BUTTERS
Times Staff

A high-level research institute will be set up by the provincial government at the University of Victoria by the end of this year, Resources Minister Robert Williams said today.

Williams said the institute will consist of highly-qualified academic personnel who will carry out research projects assigned by the provincial government.

The institute, to be headed by American resource economist Mason Gaffney, will be funded 100 per cent by the provincial government.

Funding will be through the $5 million special fund set up this year by the government for research. Williams said interest from this fund should run between $350,000 and $450,000 per year.

The minister added that he would like to see the research fund expanded to $10 million and will make such a recommendation to the provincial treasury board before the next budgetary session of the legislature.

Gaffney, 49, is a PhD graduate from the University of California at Berkeley. He was head of the University of Wisconsin's School of Economics and worked for the Resources for the Future research project in Washington, D.C.

Williams said some of the institute personnel will likely be available to teach courses at UVic.

He described the role of the institute this way: "The idea was to establish an independent institute that would be involved in pure research in land and resource economic questions. It might spread beyond that later but that's how it will start."

Gaffney, described as a renowned specialist on resource economics, is coming to Victoria to advise the government on how the institute should be set up, the minister said.

Williams said Gaffney has already done some consulting work for the B.C. government, coming to the province for a week last September and for four days in December.

The resources minister called the American a top specialist in his field, and said he has been reading Gaffney's writings for 10 years or more and is "very impressed" with his work.

Actual details of the form the research institute will take will have to be worked out after Gaffney arrives in Victoria July 15, Williams said.

He did say, however, that it

TORONTO EXODUS JAMS BEACHES

TORONTO (CP) — Thousands of city-dwellers, seeking relief from 90-degree temperatures Sunday, forced five Metropolitan Toronto region conservation parks to close their gates early.

Albion Hills, Edmund Boyd, Heart Lake, Bruce's Mill and Clareville conservation areas were barred to visitors Sunday afternoon, but people kept coming — climbing gates and crawling under fences to get in.

Simon Bontje, regional superintendent for the Metro Toronto and region conservation authority, called the situation at Edmund Boyd area "just crazy."

$ Illness 'U.S. Fault'

Times News Services

LONDON—Failure of government central banks to take action against the dollar slide threw European currency exchanges into turmoil today. With no sign of government intervention in the markets the U.S. dollar bounced up and down in value against other currencies.

It dropped to new lows in Tokyo and Hong Kong, but the European situation was confused in the extreme. Trading was reported very light, and what there was was erratic.

Gold, which usually rides the other end of the dollar seesaw, slipped back in price on London's big bullion market as the dollar climbed in Europe. Its price was fixed at $126 an ounce at the morning session. Down $1 an ounce from Friday's fixed price.

The market nervousness followed weekend reports from Basel, Switzerland, that world bankers may move to defend the dollar and hints the United States may intervene in the world currency markets.

"Most dealers are waiting for the opening of American banks to give them a lead," said a dealer for Chase Manhattan Bank in London.

The dollar opened stronger in most European money markets. But indecision and confusion pushed it lower by mid-day nearly everywhere.

Trading which a French dealer described as "erratic" pushed the dollar down in Paris, Amsterdam, Brussels, Stockholm and London.

N-BLAST ISLAND AREA CLOSED

PARIS (UPI) — The French government Sunday ordered a suspension of shipping within 66 miles of a tiny South Pacific atoll, a move that in the past has indicated France is ready to carry out atmospheric nuclear tests.

In reaction, New Zealand denounced the French decision today and said it would go ahead with plans to send a navy ship to the test area in protest, observing only a 12-mile international limit.

13 Iraqis Executed

BEIRUT (Reuter) — Thirteen more Iraqis were executed Sunday night for their part in Iraqi security chief Col. Kazem Kazzar's unsuccessful coup, Baghdad radio said today.

Fish Union Urges 'No' To Offer

Union fishermen in British Columbia are being urged to reject the latest salmon prices offer by the Fisheries Association of B.C.

But the association said the latest prices are "very definitely our final offer. We will go no higher than this."

Association manager Ken Campbell added that there is "a very real possibility" that the whole salmon season will be lost if fishermen members of the United Fishermen and Allied Workers Union (UFAWU) turn down the latest prices.

Negotiators representing UFAWU shoreworkers headed back to bargaining with the Fisheries Association of B.C., representing the companies, this afternoon and a meeting was being arranged with UFAWU tendermen.

All three groups, with a combined membership of 7,000, struck the fishing industry at noon Friday.

The Pacific Trollers Association, with 750 members, voted on the weekend to continue fishing and the trollers are expected to head for the fishing grounds Wednesday.

The Fisheries Association of B.C., in a bargaining meeting lasting to shortly before midnight Sunday, offered 50 cents a pound for sockeye this year and 52 cents next year; 40 cents a pound this year and 43 cents next year for coho; 20 cents this year and 21 cents next year for pinks; and 23 cents this year and 24 cents next year for chums caught in most fishing areas.

In addition, the association offered ¼ cent a pound into the salmon welfare fund and workmen's compensation payment of 5-12s of 2.8 per cent of gross earnings.

The union wants these prices: 52 cents a pound this year and 57 cents next year for sockeye; 47 cents and 51 cents for coho; 24 cents and 28 cents for pinks, and 32 cents and 37 cents for chums.

CONVOY CHERRIES SOLD OUT

VANCOUVER (CP) — A resounding commercial success in Vancouver Sunday for the United Fruit Growers cherry convoy marked the latest round in the British Columbia fruit industry's internal struggles.

More than seven tons of fresh cherries were sold in less than one hour in Gastown by the growers, who brought them down Saturday from orchards in the South Okanagan and Similkameen areas in a convoy of 20 trucks.

Hans Rhenisch, president of the UFG, a splinter group of the B.C. Fruit Growers Association, said the growers sold their entire load, about 11 tons in total, at prices well under normal retail prices.

HYDRO BONDS ON SALE TUESDAY

The provincial government today announced the issue of $25 million worth of B.C. Hydro parity bonds, which will go on sale to the public Tuesday.

Deputy finance minister Gerry Bryson said the bonds will carry an interest rate of seven per cent and will mature Aug. 3, 1978.

DOWNPOUR KILLS 30

GUADALAJARA, Mexico (UPI) — Authorities said today a predawn thunderstorm Sunday killed at least 30 persons in villages around this tourist city.

Another three persons were listed as missing.

A state government spokesman said 25 persons were injured, several of them critically, when buildings collapsed on them.

The flood also left an estimated 1,500 persons homeless.

Authorities sent emergency relief to the villages, where a mass burial was scheduled for the flood victims.

"It was unbelievable," a policeman said. "It was so quick that people didn't even have time to get out of bed before the water was on top of them."

TANAKA'S PARTY WINS IN TOKYO

TOKYO (UPI) — Prime Minister Kakuei Tanaka's ruling Liberal Democratic Party surged back to power today as the single largest force in the prestigious Tokyo metropolitan assembly.

Tanaka's party captured 51 of the 125 seats available to retain the same position it occupied in the previons assembly.

But voters also gave a boost to the rapidly growing Japan Communist Party whose campaign hit hard at such urban problems as the worsening urban environment, a housing shortage, inflation, traffic congestion and garbage disposal.

The Communists demonstrated their strength by increasing their number of seats to 24 from the 18 held in the previous assembly.

Crisis Poses Rationing Threat

WASHINGTON (CP) — Rationing of some types of food in the United States "might be necessary in one form or another" if the U.S. is to bolster its dollar and pay for growing imports of energy, a former agriculture department officials says.

Lester R. Brown, head of the department's international agricultural development branch in 1966-69 and currently on the staff of a private foundation here, said in an interview in U.S. News and World Report that President Nixon's curbs on soybean exports and other farm products are a "serious mistake."

Meanwhile, the U.S. agricultural department has computed that the huge drain on U.S. farm produce, mainly wheat, corn and soybeans, is adding an extra $2 billion to consumer food bills.

Even with the freeze announced by President Nixon last month, retail food prices are expected to climb at least 12 per cent this year. Department analysts says at least 1.5 to two per cent of that increase can be linked directly to farm exports.

In all, food spending may rise to $135 billion this year from about $125 billion in main reason for the $10-billion 1972. Higher prices are the boost, but there are more mouths to feed too. And they are eating more.

That means, according to the analysts, that at least $1.75 billion of the expected by the biggest flood of farm exports on record.

Elsewhere in Washington, Congressional investigators today blamed the massive sale of U.S. wheat to the Soviet Union last year for the current high price of food in the U.S., but excused the administration for making the deal.

The General Accounting Office, the investigative arm of congress, said that the agriculture department did a poor job of arranging the sale, that large companies made excessive profits from it and that the government paid $300 million in unnecessary subsidies.

While criticizing the way the deal was handled, the GAO said it benefited the U.S. balance of payments, increased farm income, reduced surplus wheat stocks and put idle acreage back into production.

Brown said the temporary curbs "will clearly aggravate this country's balance-of-payments deficit, further weakening the dollar.

"We must recognize that agriculture is one of the few areas where we have a strong competitive advantage.

"A limit on U.S. farm exports would further weaken the dollar. It would certainly limit our ability to import the vast quantities of petroleum that we must have from abroad to keep U.S. business and industry going.

"Anyone who seriously proposes limiting farm exports must also be prepared to pose a very stringent program for rationing gasoline."
